PAY TRIBUTE TO MARK TWAIN.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The intellect, the power and the wealth of the land gathered at Carnegie Hall tonight to pay tribute to the memory of Mark Twain.

William Dean Howells presided. Joseph G. Cannon, Speaker of the House, and Champ Clark, Speaker that may be, spoke from the same platform. Dr. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton, Henry Watterson, George W. Cable, Booth Tarkington, J. Pierpont Morgan, John Luther Long and many others were among those invited.

The meeting was under the auspices of the Academy of Arts and Letters.

Mr. Howells spoke briefly.

"I believe I can safely promise," he said, "that the commemoration will not be formal or funereal. The man himself could no more be formalized than flame. His vivid genius ranged at will through all the ways of life. Now that it is freed to the pathless amplitude of the skies, it could hardly offer a pattern of conventional observation.

WHAT HE MIGHT HAVE SAID.

"If the mind and make of our commemoration could be left to him, we might imagine him saying:

"'Why, of course you must not make a solemnity of it; you must not have it that sort of obsequy. I should want you to be serious about—that is, sincere, and you could not be sincere if you ran to eulogy. But we don't object here to any man's affection; we like to be liked as well as ever, and if any of you can remember some creditable thing about me, I should not mind his telling it, provided always he did not blink at the palliating circumstances, the mitigating motives, the selfish considerations that always accompany every noble action.

"'I shouldn't like to be made out a miracle of humor, either, and left a stumbling block for any man who was intending to be moderately amusing and instructive hereafter.' At the same time I don't suppose a commemoration is exactly the occasion for dwelling on a man's shortcomings in his life or his literature.'

COMPOSITE LIKENESS.

"It seems to me that we are met tonight not so much to commemorate a great man as one who still lives in us as a contemporary. Others hereafter may prove him the greatest humorist, the kindest and wisest moralist who ever lived. We who were of his acquaintance can best offer in our collective reminiscence a composite likeness of him which will keep him real and actual."

Joseph Choate recalled that Darwin used to say he kept the remedies for sleeplessness at the head of his bed—the Bible and Innocents Abroad.

"And Darwin said he did not know which he read the most," continued Mr. Choate, "but the story that earned undying fame for the author was the jumping frog story. Not even Lin-

Swain Backs Out of Wedding and Woman Sues for Breach of Promise.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A queer romance is being aired in the suit of Mrs. Johanna Link, who demands $2000 from George Odenwalt for breach of promise. Odenwalt was looking over the family album of a friend and fancied the picture of a young woman. He declared to his friend that he "could marry that girl," and the friend at once proceeded to fix things.

Before George realized what had happened he was confronted in Milwaukee by the damsel whose picture he said had brought his heart to action. George entertained his new friend royally, she declared, even taking her to several nickel theaters. Two or three days later as they were leaving one of these places he suddenly halted and taking a good look at his companion, said: "My dear, you don't look anything like the picture; I guess we better call the whole thing off right here."

The suit followed.

DASHES INTO BURNING HOME.

GOV. CARROLL RESCUES TREASURE OF AGED WOMAN.

Iowa's Chief Executive, Unrecognized, Answers With Heroism Pathetic Plea of Old Neighbor to Which Firemen Turned Deaf Ears.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DES MOINES (Iowa) Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Gov. Carroll will return tomorrow from Minneapolis, where he attended the wedding of his son today, to find himself famous. In the middle of the night he was aroused from his couch to witness the home of a neighbor burning and there performed a feat, in praise of which the capital has been ringing all day.

In the house lived Mrs. W. J. Hastie and her aged mother. They were able to leave the building uninjured but were unable to take any of their belongings, among which was a trunk in which the aged woman kept valuables.

Standing in the street in front of the house she implored the firemen to get her trunk for her, or else permit her to enter the house and get it. But the firemen would neither enter nor permit her to do so, asserting that it would be impossible to go up to a bedroom and get the trunk without being burned to death. Then Gov. Carroll stepped to the front. In the excitement none recognized him.

"I'll tackle it," he said and plunged into the door through the terrific clouds of smoke. He was gone a long time and the onlookers feared for him when suddenly he emerged pulling the trunk behind him.

BOSTON, Nov. 30.—Although the three-masted schooner Cox and Green, of Boston, has been twenty-two days on a passage from Baltimore to Bath, Me., her owners have not given up hope of her safety. B-R-R-R! UGH!

MIDDLE WEST SHIVERING AS ZERO WEATHER MO ES SOUTH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Old-fashioned winter," which has been lurking in the offing for some time, swooped down upon Chicago in earnest today in the shape of a blizzard that set the population scurrying for shelter. It finds thousands out of employment through strikes and other causes, many empty cupboards and fireless grates. The first victim of the season was William C. Rony, aged 28, who was found frozen to death before a stove in which there was no fire.

While zero weather was not experienced today, the weather man says it is on the way and will take an extended stay when it arrives. Up in the Northwest the cold wave is increasing in intensity and advancing eastward rapidly. The British Northwest, Montana and the Dakotas, all report below-zero weather. High northwest winds added to the discomfort caused by the great drop in temperature.

FLORIDA TO SUFFER.

Today's blizzard was the final kick administered by a storm which passed over Chicago and which is now sweeping out to sea off the New England coast. Storm signals were ordered up today on Lake Michigan and Superior. The cold wave is scheduled to spread to the southeast and the forecasters say will give freezing weather as far south as the middle of Florida, which is causing annals probably means the destruction of the orange and other crops in the south. Thousands of winter tourists who have already mover south to hibernate, will find the brand of weather there very much the same as that they sought to flee from.

The average temperature for November this year is 36.4, which is 2.8 below normal. The month has been abnormal. It started in at an excess of 36.7 degrees in temperature accumulated, by the preceding ten months, but it squandered this surplus like a Democratic Congress and only 57.8 degrees remained at the close of the month. The lowest temperature was 22 and the highest 67. The month was very dry, having only 1.2 inches precipitation which accounts for the absence of storms. December, according to the official dopester, will be a chilly and hostile proposition.

THOUSANDS SUFFERING.

In Michigan today train service was badly demoralized and one line was put out of business. One foot of snow is recorded in some localities.

County Agent John W. Belmont and Sherman C. Kingsley, superintendent of the United Charities of Chicago, both declared that there were approximately 22,000 men, women and children in the city suffering for want of food, fuel, clothes and medical attention, exclusive of the [illegible] ...der, on New Year's Day. TABLES TURNED.

MRS. GLOVER IS ACCUSED.

Murder Case Takes Strange Turn.

Shows Wife Had Inclination, Opportunity, Motive for Killing.

Judge Gives Two Decisions Which Come as Blow to Prosecution.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) Nov. 30.—Two decisions in favor of the defense in the trial of Hattie Le Blanc, charged with the murder of Clarence F. Glover, and the accusation by the defendant's counsel that Mrs. Lillian M. Glover, the widow, had the motive, inclination and opportunity to shoot her husband, were developments in the case today.

District Attorney Higgins fought hard to get before the jury Glover's dying statement that Hattie Le Blanc had shot him. Judge Bond overruled him, however, saying that after hearing a dozen witnesses yesterday and two today the evidence did not show that Glover knew his end was near. The District Attorney told the court "the dying declaration" was one of the essential props of the government's case and that only circumstantial evidence remained.

MRS. GLOVER ATTACKED.

The prosecution had not gone far in its evidence when it was found that the defense on cross-examination of a witness was seeking to turn the attack on Mrs. Glover. The District Attorney protested strongly, but Melvin M. Johnson, counsel for the defense, declared that he purposed to show Mrs. Glover "had the motive, the inclination, the mental and physical capacity, and the opportunity to murder her husband."

"I expect to prove this," said Mr. Johnson, "by the acts and declarations of this woman before and after her husband's murder. I desire to show that she was a vampire and I use the word advisedly."

Judge Bond decided to repeat his method of weighing the evidence before allowing it to be submitted to the jury.

EVIDENCE GOES TO JURY.

This evidence was given by Dr. N. W. Cousens, who owns the private hospital to which Glover staggered after he was shot. Dr. Cousens told of calling Mrs. Glover by telephone and of her coming to the hospital, of her refusal to see her husband, and of her going away with the request that she be notified in case of Glover's death. Later there came an inquiry by telephone as to Glover's condition and whether he had implicated his wife in the shooting.

Judge Bond then decided that the jury might hear the evidence against Mrs. Glover, and Dr. Cousens repeated his testimony under cross-examination.

The prosecution then called Mrs. Glover. She told of her discovery of the alleged relations between her husband and the defendant. She explained her failure to see her husband at the hospital by saying she was faint and was told that he was about to be operated on.

MRS. GLOVER ON STAND.

Although officers searched her house twice and she searched it once, it was not until three days after the alleged murder that Hattie Le Blanc was found hiding under a bed in one of the rooms. How she came there the witness did not know.

She identified jewelry found near the laundry as belonging to Hattie Le Blanc, as well as a handkerchief found in the laundry. She said her husband had several firearms in the house and usually carried a revolver. She identified the weapon which the prosecution claims was used. She said she had owned the laundry thirteen years and bought it with her own money. Her direct examination had not been concluded when court adjourned.

CORPSE ENDS DISCUSSION.

Row Over Which Coroner Should Take Charge Settled by Active "Dead" Man.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BURLINGTON (N. J.) Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ten minutes after physicians had pronounced him dead and an undertaker was waiting to take charge of his body, the supposed corpse of a farmer named Buxby suddenly broke up an argument as to which Coroner should sit upon his sudden and mysterious demise last night.

A brother found Buxby lying face downward and apparently lifeless in a hotel room. He summoned physicians. Buxby responded to none of the remedies and was given up for dead. Upon the arrival of the undertaker there was a difference of opinion whether Coroner Bishing or Coroner-elect Leconey should be notified. This discussion waxed warm and at its height the "corpse" moved, threw the blanket [illegible] and sat up.

Clever Dodgers When Asked About Wedding.

TANTALIZING.

ACTRESS AND AVIATOR OFF TO ENGLAND WITH FINGERS CROSSED.

Claude Graham-White and Pauline Chase Sail on Mauretania, But Will Not Say Wheather Wedding Bells are to Ring.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] On the deck of the departing Mauretania today stood Pauline Chase, actress, and ward of James M. Barrie, and Claude Grahame-White, the English aviator, to whom Miss Chase has been repeatedly reported engaged.

Both of them dodged direct questions as to their intentions toward each other. But as the tug drew away from her pier, Miss Chase, who is as much given to putting other people mentally up in the air as her supposed fiance is given to going up literal air, laughed at the questioners down on the string pier and pointed a dainty finger at the aviator.

With her other hand upraised she crossed the middle finger and the index finger, after the manner of a marble-playing boy forestalling a coup by his opponent.

Then she laughed again.

REPORTERS STUMPED.

The marine reporters, who are terrible gossips when it comes to a matter of the love affairs of travelers, gathered in a dazed bunch and looking at one another.

"Now, what are you going to say she meant?" they asked one another. And as none of them could agree, this newspaper leaves it to the guess of each individual reader.

Here are a few of the suggestions put forth:

"They were already married."

"Miss Chase doesn't mean to marry Grahame-White because she does not want him."

"She wants him, but can't get him."

"She thinks he was smart enough to fool everybody who tried to corner him."

"He wants her, but can't get her."

And a few more. Certainly Miss Chase and Mr. Grahame-White had not been overcome by each other in the crowd at the sailing.

"Don't talk nonsense," said Miss Chase, whose name was added to the sailing list just before the ship sailed. "I am going back to London to play 'Peter Pan,' that's all."

Then she introduced her chaperon, Mrs. J. Frank Hale of Boston, and talked about the weather.

AVIATOR LAUGHS.

"Oh, dear, dear, stop your spoofin," was the reply of Grahame-White. Then he threw back his head and laughed with explosive heartiness.

"You fellows will print anything that you like, anyway," he said, "so now what's the use of my saying that it isn't so, or that it is?"

Grahame-White predicted that future aeroplanes would make 200 miles an hour and that passengers would ride in a glass chamber. He thought the aeroplane when developed would end war.

Irene Fenwick, leading woman in "The Speckled Band," and a friend of both Grahame-White and Miss Chase, said she knew something she wanted awfully to tell somebody, but she just mustn't.

BRITAIN UPSET.

AMAZING CHANGES FEATURE OF ENGLAND'S ELECTION CAMPAIGN.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The present election campaign is one of amazing changes. Lord Lansdowne's unexpected presentation of a scheme for the reform of the House of Lords, has been surpassed in suddenness by Mr. Balfour's throwing over of tariff reform as an issue of the elections.

Lord Roseberry, in the course of a speech today at Manchester, said:

"The House of Lords has ceased to exist; it has surrendered its powers to the nation. This is a fact of enormous importance."

Lord Roseberry admitted that it was deathbed repentance, but he contended that deathbed repentance, if sincere, was valid and valuable.

CHANGE PROVES SURPRISE.

Mr. Balfour's adoption of the referendum is generally attributed to pressure from an influential section of the Unionist Free Traders, led by Lord Cromer, although it is claimed by the bulk of the Unionist party, once their surprise was over, as a master stroke of skillful electioneering. The opposition leader's change of tactics took the old Conservatives completely aback and caused consternation among the ardent Protectionists.

The Liberals, on the other hand, characterized his attitude as adroit slipperiness and opportunism. The Liberal leaders have not yet had time to adjust themselves to the changed conditions.

David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, speaking at Llandrindrod Wells tonight, reiterated that the cost of a referendum would be $10,000,000. It was a mere device, he said, to put a more effective weapon in the hands of the wealthy classes. The Liberals would have none of it.

Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, speaking at Bristol, said Balfour's proposal of the referendum was delusive, dangerous and [illegible], and calculated to [illegible] representative government.

DROPS DEAD IN PRISON.

Society Woman Has Pathetic End.

Mrs. Clemshire, Wanted Here for Petty Crime, Expires in Oakland.

Gets Thousand Dollars from Banker; Starts Big Deals on Nothing.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Death claimed Mrs. Alice C. Clemshire this morning at the County Jail where she was a prisoner waiting to be taken back to Los Angeles to stand trial for obtaining goods under false pretenses.

She was stricken with heart failure in a room of Matron White's apartments on the fourth floor of the administration wing of the jail, which she had been allowed to occupy rather than suffer the humiliation and disgrace of being placed in a cell, and breathed her last before Dr. Curdts, the prison surgeon, could be summoned.

The matron was within a few feet of Mrs. Clemshire and was talking to her at the time she fell to the floor. Mrs. Clemshire was a sister of Harry Squires of Berkeley and had lived in Oakland for many years, where she was well known and very prominent socially. She was 57 years old, and a widow.

Coroner Tisdale took charge of the body and had it transferred to the morgue for inquest. Mrs. Clemshire had been afflicted for a number of years with heart trouble and bronchitis and the shock in connection with her sudden death to that worry over her affairs aggravated both ailments and hastened the end.

FOR TROUSSEAU.

Considerable mystery surrounded the trouble in which Mrs. Clemshire became involved in Los Angeles, particularly as to the motive which prompted her to lay herself liable to criminal prosecution. Some of this was dispelled last evening, however, when the woman confided to Sheriff Frank Barnet that the goods she disappeared with from the southern metropolis had been purchased by her for her wedding trousseau with the expectation that her husband-to-be, whose name she refrained from mentioning, would pay the bills.

She indicated that at the last moment something went wrong and the engagement was broken off, or the wedding postponed, but this Mrs. Clemshire did not make clear to the Sheriff.

After she left Los Angeles, the warrant for Mrs. Clemshire's arrest was forwarded to Sheriff Barnet to be served, and armed with it, last Monday afternoon, Deputy Sheriff Ed Sweeney took the woman into custody at her apartments, No. 1418 Telegraph avenue. She did not deny having had the goods in her possession and on the information she volunteered Sheriff Barnet located them all intact at the Victoria Hotel in San Francisco, where Mrs. Clemshire left them the day she arrived from the south.

JAIL OFFICIALS KIND.

They are still there, waiting to be returned to the store from which they were obtained, or whatever disposition the court in the southern city makes of them.

Immediately after his sister's arrest, Harry Squires employed the law firm of Fitzgerald & Abbott to look after her interests, and the attorneys did everything in their power to secure her release on bail pending the arrival of an officer from Los Angeles to return her for trial. A provision of the statutes, which requires that a bond must be approved by the court in which a criminal charge is preferred, frustrated their efforts, however, and it was incumbent upon Mrs. Clemshire to remain in jail.

Everything was done at the jail that was possible to have Mrs. Clemshire feel that she was more of a guest than prisoner there. Yesterday afternoon the Sheriff sent her in his automobile, accompanied by a deputy and her brother, to her apartments to secure what clothing she would need for her journey back to Los Angeles, and Matron White served her with special meals in the matron's own dining-room.

DIAZ READY TO LEAD TROOPS.

President of Mexico Talks on Recent Disturbance.

Present Difficulties of No Moment, He Says.

Blames Stock Exchange Manipulators for Trouble.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Delegations of leading citizens of many parts of the country have called on President Diaz, during the last few days and given him personal assurance of the loyalty to the government of the people of their respective localities.

In responding to an address of this kind by Luis Lopez Masse, prosecuting attorney of the Federal district comprising the State of Oaxaca, President Diaz said:

"The present difficulties do not merit my personal attention to the agitators; but if the occasion should arise, wherein a force of even 5000 men should oppose the government, I shall be there, as I have ever been, at the head of my troops.

"The government is possessed sufficient forces to subdue the small seditious group who have been disturbing the public peace. These movements which in reality are of insignificant importance, but which the press has given large proportions, I attribute to stock exchange machinations, our bonds having lost several points through the false alarm.

"In a way, however, it is a satisfaction of confidence in our country inasmuch as these same speculators know that as soon as order is re-established, the values will resume a normal state."

DIAZ AND CORRAL TO BE INAUGURATED TODAY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 30.—With simple ceremony, Gen. Diaz will take the oath of office as President of the Republic of Mexico for the eighth time tomorrow. In view of the disturbances through which the country has recently passed, the inauguration will not be marked by the season of festivities that has accompanied it in former years, but will be conducted with the same formal dignity and impressiveness.

The ceremonies will occur at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning in the hall of the Palace of Mines, where the Chamber of Deputies has been holding its session pending the completion of its new home. Only the diplomatic corps and a few other delegated personages in addition to the high Mexican officials, will attend.

Following the induction of President Diaz, the oath will be administered to Ramon Corral, re-elected to the vice-presidency.

The President and Vice-President will then proceed to the national palace, where they will receive the congratulations of diplomats, government officials and private delegations.

CELEBRATION TO BE HELD AT TORREON.

TORREON (Mex.) Nov. 30.—Official celebration of the inauguration of President Diaz and Vice-President Corral will be held at the municipal palace here tomorrow. No further disturbances are expected, but the authorities are exercising the greatest vigilance to guard against surprise.

The roads leading into Torreon are guarded by rurales and the jefe politicos of both the city and Gomez Palacio. Diaz says ample preparations have been made to stop any demonstration.

With tomorrow safely passed, a feeling of relief will be expressed, however, in this vicinity, inasmuch as that day marks the final date of the period designated by Madero in his proclamation for popular uprisings.

GALLAGHER ENTERS PLEA.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—James J. Gallagher, who shot Mayor William J. Gaynor of New York on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse last August, was brought into court today in Jersey City and arraigned before Judge Blair on the charge of atrocious assault with intent to kill Street Cleaning Commissioner Edwards of New York and with carrying concealed weapons. Edwards was with Mayor Gaynor when the latter was shot and in protecting the executive is alleged to have been attacked by Gallagher and slightly wounded.

Gallagher pleaded not guilty with certain reservations, and was at once taken back to his cell. He was recently indicted for the attacks on the Mayor and Commissioner Edwards. In court there was no mention by the prosecution of the prisoner's attack on the Mayor. It developed that Prosecutor Garvan intended to keep in reserve the charge against Gallagher of atrocious assault with intent to kill Mayor Gaynor. Under the New Jersey laws, should the victim of an assault die within a year and a day after the commitment of the crime, a charge of murder will lie against his assailant. Prosecutor Garvan said he would bring the case to trial about December 15. If found guilty on the two counts to which he pleaded today, Gallagher can be sentenced to a total of fifteen years imprisonment.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHERBOURG, Nov. 30.—A fierce gale is raging along the coast and the battleships of the second division of the United States Atlantic fleet have been forced to stand off shore under full pressure. It is understood that an American packet has been sunk and seven men lost.

A launch from the battleship Louisiana made a gallant rescue of the crew from the launch of the French armored cruiser Duplex, which was swamped by the heavy seas. Many of the American bluejackets are ashore, being unable to get back to their ships.

BALL FOR AMERICANS.

DENVER JUDGE SCORES LAWS.

PRESENT JURY SYSTEM INSULT TO FREE PEOPLE.

Men Repeatedly Brought Into Court to Serve as Talesmen Who Are Not Even Bona-fide Residents of City—Remarks Brought About by Jap Murder Trial Incident.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DENVER, (Col.) Nov. 30.—In overruling today a motion to dismiss the entire jury panel summoned in a murder case, Judge Shattuck of the West Side Criminal Court scored jury methods in Denver and expressed the hope that his action might be overruled by the Supreme Court.

The occasion was the trial of Genkyo Mitisunaga, a Japanese charged with the murder of Mrs. Catharine Wilson. Mitisunaga's attorney alleging that the jury panel was made up of professional jurors.

Judge Shattuck said: "There are certain things about our judicial system here that are a disgrace and are an insult to free people. The situation is such that men are repeatedly brought in here to serve as jurors when they are not even bona fide residents of this city. They are in no way qualified to serve. I had a bill introduced in the Legislature aiming at changing this injustice. The house passed it, but the Senate turned it down. In overruling your motion, I just want to say that I hope you will take my decision up to the Supreme Court and that that court will hold me to be wrong and will force the Legislature to take some steps to remedy this defect."

Only part of a jury was selected today. During the proceedings Mitisunaga was an object of pity to many of the spectators. The accused Japanese, unable to comprehend a word of English, sat tremblingly through it all.

Mitisunaga is accused of having slain Mrs. Wilson, who had engaged him to clean her house, and of having cut up her body and hidden it in a box in the basement of the dwelling.

TRIBUTES TO TWAIN.

coln's two minutes' speech at Gettysburg has been read so much or committed to memory so often as that remarkable story."

Uncle Joe Cannon was warmly greeted. "I'll read my remarks," he said. "It is the first time I've ever read a manuscript to an audience and I congratulate you upon the fact that it won't be long."

The Speaker said he knew Mark Twain personally and he described how Clemens came to Washington in the interest of the copyright law.

MARK TWAIN'S LETTER.

"Finally," said Uncle Joe, "he tried to persuade me to allow him to lobby on the floor of Congress, and wrote me a letter and brought it to me in the Speaker's room." As read by Mr. Cannon, the letter ran:

"Dear Uncle Joe: Please give me the thanks of Congress, not next week, but right away. It is very necessary. Do accomplish this at once, by persuasion if you can, by violence if you must, for it is absolutely necessary that I get on the floor for two or three hours and talk to the Congressmen, man by man. I have arguments with me. Also a barrel with liquid in it. I have stayed away from Congress and let it alone for seventy-one years and I am entitled to its thanks. Congress knows this well and it never has publicly acknowledged its appreciation. Send me a reply at once with an order on the sergeant-at-arms.

"With love and benediction,

"MARK TWAIN."

Mr. Cannon added with a smile, that he sent his messenger to summon the Congressmen to the Speaker's room, and "I helped Mark Twain to lobby."

CHAMP CLARK'S SPEECH.

Congressman Champ Clark of Missouri, spoke on "Mark Twain as a lobbyist."

"It is in keeping with the eternal fitness of things," he said, "that a Missourian should participate in paying honor to the most famous Missourian that ever lived. With me it is a labor of love.

"I consider it my good fortune to have known this illustrious and loveable man personally, and my bad fortune not to have known him for a long time. He was born within a few miles of my Congressional District, at the confluence of three forks of Salt River, a stream of evil omen to candidates upon whose briny bosom many of them sail into the gulf of oblivion.

"I had read with avidity every word he ever wrote and counted him among the world's benefactors; but luck or fate or fortune so ordered things that I never beheld him in the flesh until he was in the gorgeous sunset days of his long, useful and glorious life.

PRINCE OF LOBBYISTS.

"The way I came to know Mark Twain personally is that three or four years ago he visited Washington as a lobbyist. Let not the prudish and squeamish shudder at the term, for Mark Twain was not only a lobbyist, but a very prince of lobbyists. He did honor, not only to the lobbyist, but also to those with whom he lobbied.

"So it came to pass that on a memorable day, Mark Twain, lobbyist, with his world-wide reputation as his avant courier, descended upon the capitol in gorgeous attire and swept everything before him. Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed as was this great Missourian, for in the dead of winter, he wore a suit of white flannels, while as the snow which filled the air, while all the world wondered.

"He created a profound sensation, as he no doubt intended to do, a sensation which so far as he was concerned, was strictly utilitarian in character and cunningly planned for effect upon hard-headed matter-of-fact solons.

AT LAST.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the Brooklyn explorer, in an article which will be published in Hampton's Magazine, confesses that he does not know whether he reached the north pole or not. Dr. Cook, who has been in hiding for more than a year, has informed the editors of the magazine publishing his story that he will return to the United States with his wife and children December 22 in order to spend Christmas here.

Dr. Cook in his story deals with the psychology of his adventure and says:

"Did I get to the North Pole? Perhaps, I made a mistake in thinking that I did. Perhaps I did not make a mistake. After mature thought I confess that I do not know absolutely whether I reached the pole or not. This may come as an amazing statement, but I am willing to startle the world if, by so doing, I can get an opportunity to present my case.

ASKS CALM JUSTICE.

"By my case, I mean not my case as a geographical discoverer, but my case as a man. Much as the attainment of the North Pole once meant to me, the sympathy and confidence of my fellow men mean more.

"Fully, freely, and frankly, I shall tell you every thing. Tell you everything—and leave the decision with you. If, after reading my story, you say, 'Cook is sincere and honest; half-crazed by months of isolation and hunger, he believed he reached the pole, he is not a faker,' then I shall be satisfied."

Dr. Cook tells the story of his life and pictures what he calls the overpowering ambition for exploration that beset him until it finally culminated in his effort to reach the pole. Dr. Cook declares that at the time he convinced himself he had discovered the pole, he was half-mad. He had spent two years in his quest and during that time had endured hunger and privation that, he says, would have unbalanced any mind.

ABSOLUTE PROOF IMPOSSIBLE.

The explorer states that it would be impossible for any man to demonstrate beyond question that he had been the North Pole. He characterizes as a region of in[illegible] eyes.

his voluntary exile from the United States.

ELUDES FOLLOWERS EASILY.

The explorer says that notwithstanding the fact that he was followed by the shrewdest newspaper men in the world, day after day, and that sums ranging upwards of several thousands of dollars were offered for a clue as to his whereabouts, he has never worn a disguise and has never taken any unusual precautions to conceal his identity. Part of the time, he says, his wife has been with him and part of the time, his children.

Dr. Cook and his wife are now in Europe and the children are in a convent in France. Dr. Cook, during most of his exile, has been in London. He says he has gone about among Americans there with the utmost freedom and at times has registered under his own name, but only a few have guessed his identity. Those who did guess it, Dr. Cook says, were turned away with ease by the remark "Why yes, I have been told that before."

With the opportunities for thought that his exile has given him—Dr. Cook says he never even had time to sleep more than three or four hours between his arrival at Copenhagen and his disappearance in New York—he has found growing stronger and stronger the desire to return to his own country, to be understood by his own people. He realizes better than any one else, the esteem in which he was held.

"I have been called the greatest liar in the world, the most monumental impostor in history," says Dr. Cook. "I believe that in every undesirable way I stand unique, the object of such suspicion and vituperation as have assailed few men."

With this realization, Dr. Cook wrote his story and says that to him the honor of discovering the North Pole no longer means any thing. The explorer has been working on his story since last August.

NO REFLECTIONS ON PEARY.

According to the editor of Hampton's magazine, he says "his sole desire is to make the people of the United States realize just what he went through during his two and a half years in the Arctic fastnesses, and to make them see what processes of thinking or lack of thinking it was that led him to do the thing which confirmed to the average mind the worst suspicions against him."

The publishers of the article issued statement today that nowhere in his [illegible]ive does Dr. Cook cast any re[illegible]s on Peary or question Peary's

STEEL PRICES TO STAY HIGH.

Producers Meet and Agree on No Cutting.

Biggest Men of Trade Join in Understanding.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The price of steel will not be cut. Forty of the leading producers and their representatives, who stand for approximately 95 per cent. of the production of the country, met here today and decided it was for the good of the industry to keep quotations where they are.

Among these were: Judge E. H. Gary and W. E. Cory, chairman and president respectively of the United States Steel Corporation; John A. Topping, chairman of the Republic Iron and Steel Company; Willis L. King, vice-president of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company; Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation; E. S. Clark, president of the Lackawanna Steel Company; Alexis W. Thompson, president of the Inland Steel Company, and Wallace H. Rowe, president of the Pittsburgh Steel Company, all members of the American Iron and Steel Institute, of which Judge Gary is president.

HAS BEEN CUTTING.

Since the last meeting of the institute two months ago, when a similar agreement was reached, there has been an understanding in the trade that some manufacturers were not living up to this "gentlemen's agreement." When last the small makers cut prices the United States Steel Corporation followed their lead and went after the market aggressively with a corresponding general unsettlement of the "barometer of business."

Therefore there was the feeling yesterday and today that some such action might eventuate from today's conference and its outcome was awaited with much interest. At the close of the meeting Judge Gary gave out the following statement:

BOOKINGS LESS THAN CAPACITY.

"Representatives of about 95 per cent. in tonnage capacity of the manufacturers of steel in America met at luncheon, and the two hours following were occupied in ascertaining the condition of business in this particular line and in the expressions of opinion concerning present prices. It was stated that on the average of all branches, the bookings were about 50 per cent. of capacity and the shipments somewhat in excess. There has been a slight, though marked increase, in daily bookings, month by month, since the first of August to the present time.

"Prices as a rule are well maintained, though in some lines, as usual, there is some cutting on the part of small producers who were not represented.

PRESENT PRICES JUST.

"Without exception, the views expressed by those present regarding the future, were favorable. Also, each one voiced the opinion that present prices are fair and reasonable, and should not be changed.

"For some time, purchasing by railroad companies has been very much below normal, but it is the concensus of opinion that there will be an increase in the near future. The account of daily bookings at present is about equal to the total capacity of the mills ten years ago.

"The disposition of the manufacturers of steel to co-operate, so far as it is proper, remains unchanged."

HUSBAND HELD RESPONSIBLE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—An abandoned wife has the right to sue her husband for money she spends to support herself and children during her husband's neglect, even though that money be her own. This is the decision rendered in the State Supreme Court here, in a ruling in a suit brought against Louis de Brauwere by his wife, Kalice. The court declares this is without precedent.

Mrs. de Brauwere sets forth that in September, 1904, her husband abandoned her and her children without cause, and that she has since spent $3840 for their support. Justice Whitney says:

"Must a wife, abandoned among strangers, be ruined or starved, or work herself to the bone, without hope of repayment from her husband, whose legal and moral duty it is to support her, when one abandoned among friends can live upon the proceeds of loans which the husband is bound to pay?"

During this time, however, Mrs. Clemshire did not sit idly by. She suggested to the Virginia managers that she was anxious to purchase a villa site on the aristocratic bluffs overlooking the Pacific. Immediately real estate men got busy, and options were taken on every available piece of property on the ocean front. These were submitted to her, but each she turned down until a tract abutting the Meyer place was shown. This took her aesthetic and artistic eye and the necessary papers were prepared for the sale.

KEEN BUSINESS INSIGHT.

And right there is where her keen insight into business affairs and ability to use her social status, and physical charms aided her. For a few days she postponed the closing of the deal, to permit a return wire from her alleged fiance, Mr. Schwab, in San Francisco, and in the meantime suggested to the real estate agent that the property which was valued at $75,000, be placed in escrow. This was done, and after the three-day limit elapsed, she explained that the deal had better be postponed another week.

While the Long Beach agents were awaiting her pleasure, Mrs. Clemshire was completing a realty deal in Gervanna involving $50,000. But even here she did not stop, for while both deals were near consummation, she called upon an official of a local bank, and upon the strength of the near-purchases, a flood of winning smiles, and an ocean of promises, she secured a cool $1000, without any security at all.

And the end was not yet. With the $1600 belonging to the bank in her pockets, she attempted to launch a vast number of schemes which hiefly failed to materialise. On the strength of those, however, she borrowed from local and Long Beach society women and financiers, ran big bills for clothing and delicate raiment at various stores in Long Beach and Los Angeles, and even failed to pay her hotel bills.

The experiences of Mrs. Clemshire read like a fairy tail. Endowed with rare wit, cultured, and armed with the best of social references on the Coast, she entered the most exclusive drawing-rooms of Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, San Diego and Long Beach. She was thoroughly at home, it is said, discussing the works of the masters, or topics of national interest. She had the worthy faculty of making friends, and did not make the mistake of ordinary people, by losing them before they could be of some use to her. She was about 60 years old, and her gracious manner, and gray streaked hair aided her materially in winning the confidence of financiers.

According to a well-known realty man of Los Angeles, who was financially smitten by the strange woman, she would have never been discovered if she had maintained her pace above the realm of petty finances. She succeeded in having a Long Beach business man introduce her to Mr. Wolf, credit manager for Bullock's Department Store. Mrs. Clemshire at the time happened to be out of cash, but gave a check for $226 worth of raiment, to be delivered at a downtown hotel. That was May 15. Since then she has never been around to Bullock's to settle.

When hope of collecting the money departed with a visit of Mrs. Clemshire to her family in Oakland several days ago, a criminal action, obtaining of goods under false pretenses, was filed against her in Judge Baird's court. She was arrested in Oakland.

HAD SOME TROUBLE IN LONG BEACH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONG BEACH, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Alice C. Clemshire, who dropped dead in jail at Oakland today was a guest for a number of months of Hotel Virginia, where she posed as "Dr. Clemshire," and gave treatments. She interested the hotel people by a statement that Charles Schwab and party, who were personal friends were coming to Long Beach and would want fourteen suites reserved. She went over the hotel and designated the rooms she thought would be suitable. The Schwab party never appeared and soon after Dr. Clemshire departed after she had secured $95 under false pretenses from Myron G. Wells, a realty operator, who later caused her arrest. During her stay it also developed that she promised to secure a public position for a young woman in Los Angeles on payment of $50 in advance. Failing to deliver the goods, she was sued for the money. She paid up and the matter was dropped.

THIEF LIKES FOUNTAIN PENS.

ORANGE, Nov. 30.—C. R. Bird's book store was burglarized last night, the thief gaining entrance by cutting out the screen of a back window. About three dozen fountain pens are missing.

Tomorrow night on the floor of the Orange Athletic Club, the club team will play the basketball team of Pomona College. The locals last year won the State Y. M. C. A. championship.

BALLET IS STUPENDOUS.

Pavlowa a Poet's Dream; Mordkin Greek Statue.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

An English author recently said of Anna Pavlowa, "She laughs with the sweet seriousness of a nun taking the sunshine."

That was a wonderful expression about a wonderful woman.

It is hard to define the charm of this singular, ethereal little creature, who for nearly three hours completely dominated an audience of scarcely less than 5000 persons at the Auditorium last night.

The triumph of Pavlowa—as are the triumphs of all artists, whether actors or singers or dancers—is a triumph of complexity. Pavlowa has mastered the technique of dancing to its uttermost degree. In addition, she possesses the intensity of a great emotional actress. Further, she has a face and eyes which express with wonderful fidelity every shade of her emotions. And it is evident that she is a woman of the keenest intelligence; the surety with which she judges every effect, and anticipates every heart-throb of her audience, demonstrates that beyond a doubt.

The countenance of this 26-year-old Russian woman is essentially tragic. There is a haunting melancholy even in her smile, though that smile is quite irresistable.

Pavlowa is the center-piece around which this remarkable production revolves, but before going further let me say that as a whole it is, without doubt, the most remarkable exhibition of dancing which has ever been seen in America.

The entire affair is of extraordinary class, from the orchestra, with its eminent director, through the main body of the dancers, the solo dancers—the big body of mechanical assistants, even—to the two celebrities who are the human capstones of this structure of grand human motion.

Genee has been acclaimed the world's greatest ballet dancer. Maud Allan has been called the superlative interpreter of dancing emotions. But to my mind Pavlowa is greater than either, whereas Genee has all the technique she has little real feeling, while Allan, a throbbing poem of sentiment, is handicapped by having no technique whatever—in the professional sense of the word.

Now comes a little Russian who has both the technique of Genee and the superlative temperament of Miss Allan—Pavlowa. Pavlowa is the irresistible and invincible combination of the two.

Any one who has not looked on Mordkin in the semi-nude, those words are decidedly fudgy, not to say slimy.

But Mordkin is the only male upon the stage to whom the word "beautiful" can be applied in its true sense, without the slightest reproach of effeminacy. His lines are those of a Greek statue. His face is the classic countenance of a pagan demi-god.

Theodore Stier has the art of conducting in a virile and magnetic manner without making himself in any manner conspicuous. And this is an accomplishment, believe me, that only a few of the celebrated baton-wielders possess. The orchestra, though numbering less than forty men, has the resonance and tonality of more than fifty.

The curtain last evening rose upon the ballet "Giselle," a poetic story of France under Louis XV. The ballet construction is by Theophile Gautier, with music by Adam. Briefly, it is the story of teh village lovers, and the royal preference for the beloved—resulting in this instance in the death of the girl, who falls lifeless upon the stage.

The second part of this ballet showed the most wonderful pantomimic dancing that Los Angeles has ever seen. In a dim forest vale it opens with a moonlight fairy dance, folowing which the corpse of the dead bride is raised from the grave and brought to life by the fairy queen. The girl dances in the moonlight with her lover, and as, laying her back at last, lifeless and cold, upon her bier, is startled by a hand upon his shoulder, death overcomes him too and he falls beside her on the ground.

I wish I knew the technique of dancing, that I might describe the wonderful feats of Anna Pavlowa in this scene. Her toe dancing, her whirls, her pirouetting, the rush of her lithe body far aloft in Mordkin's arms, the frantic climaxes of both of them—all were individual moments of a long and dazzling enchantment.

The latter half of the evening was devoted to a series of dances of rare charm, in which the chief star was Pavlowa Pajitzkaia, an exquisitely beautiful woman who possesses just the assets which are opposite the name of Pavlowa Pajitzkaia is a living creature of the senses, whereas Pavlowa is a poet's dream of soul.

The first was a Polish dance, and a version of the Liszt Second Rhapsody, the whole company, which for dash and kindling enthusiasm were simply indescribable.

Then there were other wonderful dances by the two stars—an ancient dance, with bow and arrows, by the lean-muscled Mordkin as set to the Saint-Saens pianissimo idyll, "The Swan," in which, almost floating in a sea of blue spotlight and silver sheen, Pavlowa seemed a sweet spirit from another world.

The costuming of this aggregation of dancers is magnificent. The scenery, while not elaborate, is thoroughly acceptable, and the lighting is evidently in the hands of a group of masters.

This afternoon a new programme, with "The Arabian Nights" ballet, will be featured.

Tonight the programme of last evening will be given.

Oliver Morosco brought a trunkful of new plays back home, a number of which are by eminent authors. The name of Eugene Walter is mentioned here, though Mr. Morosco has not said that he has a Walter play for try-out purposes.

At any rate, the most importunate of the authorial wooers was C. T. Dazey, who has not always dined on ambrosia since the first glory of "In Old Kentucky" paled.

Dazey had a play he wished to read Mr. Morosco, and called him up steadily from 8 in the morning until 1 the following morning. At last the Los Angeles manager told him he never listened to plays as they were read, and bade him begone.

Quite undaunted, Mr. Dazey hired some lackey to slip his play into Mr. Morosco's portmanteau, and he just had to read it on the way home.

"So I did," said he, last night. "It is called 'Captain LaFitte,' after the famous New Orleans pirate of a century ago—and I'm blamed if it isn't the best piece of the whole new lot!"

This same Morosco brought back [illegible] suits of Broadway clothes, and can't be expected to sartorially dim any luminary who may appear upon his stages.

Last night Mr. Morosco demonstrated the new law of the Tuxedo, which does away with the Tuxedo hat and calls for the niftiest black-and-white stripes—to match, if you please, in waistcoat, socks, tie, handerchief and scarf.

Lon Beasley, Brummelian wonder that he is, hid under his own automobile when he saw him coming, and Will Errast unconsciously tried to sell him a box.

The next production at the Burbank will be a comedy, "An American Widow," in which Virginia Hammond made her biggest hit when she was here some time ago. Miss Marjorie Rambeau will have the Harned role, and Grace Travers will play her most successful part again, that of Madame Absinthe. The comedy is a satire on the ease with which divorces are obtained.

This week at Levy's is a lively one. The bill opens with Jack Hendricks in modern and popular songs. His opening song, "Life's a Funny Proposition After All," is given in a Cohan manner.

The Cosmopolitan Trio begins work with a trio from "Il Trovatore," and was well received even after weeks of Bevani Grand opera. Bellini's "Toreador Song," a baritone solo, showed the versatility of this singer. Anselm's tenor solo, "My Bride Shall be my Flag," was new and attractive. Helen Cole, the soprano, presented a dainty bit, "Cupid's Garden."

Sophie Tucker will lintroduce some new to her public at Pantages next week. It will be the first time the songs have been rendered and the singer expects it to add greatly to her reputation as an interpreter of a certain form of melody and words that can only originate among the darkies of the southern cotton fields. The title of the new song will not be given out in advance. Upon her appearance this week at Pantages she has been given a generous reception, showing that she still retains her hold upon the affections of Pantages patrons.

The bill for next week will consist of the Baader-Lavelle troupe of circus gymnasts; Bigelow's Merry Youngsters in "School Time Frolics"; Guido Giuldini in a whistling specialty; Hamilton Bros., comedy acrobats; Remanelli, trick violinist; Finn and Ford, black face singing and dancing comedians and new moving pictures.

Edmund Day, one of the best known and most successful writers for the vaudeville stage today, will be represented at the Los Angeles Theater next week by his latest product, "200 Miles From Broadway," which will be offered by a team of clever players, Campbell and Yates. The scene of this humorous playet is laid in a near-hotel in a village in Vermont, where an actress has become stranded and is forced to take a position as waitress, where she meets a young and slangy bookmaker, who has escaped from New York on account of Gov. Hughes' crusade against the racetrack.

What the management of the Grand Operahouse announces is its biggest and most expensive royalty production of the year will be "Nearly A Hero," which Ferris Harman and his company will offer for the first time in the West and for the first time by a stock organization, Sunday afternoon.

"Nearly A Hero" is perhaps the best starring vehicle Sam Bernard ever appeared in and it will show Ferris Hartman in a German dialect role of Ludwig Knoedler, which will give him the best fun-making opportunities he has enjoyed this season. The play is not only a great fun show, but contains some of the catchiest musical numbers that have been found in a musical play of recent writing.

"Nearly A Hero" has been announced on several different occasions but on account of the inability to obtain the script and music owing to the express drivers strike, it had to be delayed. Keen interest is being shown in the production and unusually elaborate preparations are being made for its presentation.

The benefit given by the Theatrical Managers' Relief Association and the Theatrical Mechanics' Association will take place at the Auditorium tomorrow afternoon, and indications now are that the great Auditorium will be packed with people by the time the curtain rises on the first act at 2 o'clock. It has been found necessary to commence the performance one hour owing to the extreme length of the programme, which upon examination discloses over twenty-five splendid numbers. Every associated theatrical organization will be represented, besides the services of other artists who have generously donated their services in this worthy cause. There is a steady demand for seats for the benefit, and the sale has reached large proportions. Seats are obtainable at the Auditorium box office.

WATCH LOS ANG

Joseph Brooks of New York, one of the prominent members of the Shubert and Erlanger theatrical enterprises, arrived yesterday at the Alexandria on a tour of the Northwest. He is accompanied by Mrs. Brooks.

Mr. Brooks stated that his firm is busily engaged erecting five new theaters in the Northwest, which recently lost several theatrical houses. Mr. Brooks says that Los Angeles has gained a great name throughout the East as a producing center, and that the larger theatrical managers are getting the habit of watching Los Angeles for new productions.

"One of the great difficulties we have to encounter" said Mr. Brooks yesterday "is the rapid growth of stock company and it's great influence on the high-price traveling attractions. We will be compelled to meet the problem but at present we are thinking about it a great deal. It may be solved by cheapening the traveling expenses, but not in the production or the salaries of the company, but in the railroads charged." Brooks will remain a few days in Los Angeles looking over the local situation and will then go to the East by way of New Orleans.

TREASURERS' B

Box Office Men and Players' Club to Unite in Big Ball to Be Given This Eve

The "Actors' Ball," so-called, as it is really the big social event of the Theatrical Treasurers' Association each year, will be given tonight at the Goldberg-Bosley terpsichorean institution on South Flower street.

The grand march will start promptly at midnight, and according to present plans it will be led by the following couples: Lewis S. Stone and Marjorie Rambeau; A. Byron Beasley and Miss Eleanor Gordon; Mr. and Mrs. William Faversham, and Dick Arrie and Florence Stone.

David M. Hartford, stage director of the Burbank company, is floor manager.

"Billy" Arend will furnish the music. Floral decorations of very unusual elaborateness are being put in. Some of the programmes, embossed and printed in several colors, are of unique and original design, and altogether the most unprecedented in dancing circles hereabouts.

BARBEE TALKS.

EPARATION OF HOOKS.

USBAND ADMITS THAT THEY HAVE PARTED.

Declares That He Has No Present Plans for Suing for Divorce—Declines to Give Reasons for Their Separating—Says There Is No Other Man in the Case.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Barbee S. Hook, who is living with his mother in the family residence at 2765 Steiner street, this city, denied this afternoon that he is planning to obtain a divorce. Hook admitted that there has been a separation and said that so far as he knows his wife is in San Diego.

Questioned as to the cause for the separation, Hook declared that it is no person's business, but he asserted that there is no other man in the case. Hook would not express an opinion as to whether there is any chance for reconciliation. He said that if his wife contemplates suing for a divorce he has no knowledge of such intent.

"I have no idea how a rumor, such as you say comes from Los Angeles, to the effect that I am contemplating a divorce action could have started," asserted Hook. "It is true that I and my wife have separated, but I have never considered for a moment applying for a divorce.

"So far as any other man coming between us, there is no word of truth in that report. While I have no absolute knowledge, I am inclined to doubt the report that Mrs. Hook is preparing to bring action for divorce."

MRS. HOOK CONFIRMS.

DIVORCE IS DISCUSSED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. John E. Pearce and daughter, Mrs. Barbee S. Hook, arrived tonight found at their home in this city. In regard to prospective divorce proceedings to be brought by Mr. Hook, both stated they had nothing to say.

"It is true," says Mrs. Hook, "that Barbee and myself have separated. Refusing the cause I have nothing to say. Being a young girl I would prefer that the papers do not make notoriety of my case."

When asked if she was aware that divorce proceedings were contemplated Mrs. Hook said: "I know nothing of them at present and on that point I prefer not to be quoted."

When asked if she contemplated bringing divorce later on, she replied: "That I cannot say at present. I do not care to say whether I will or not. I do not care to make any further statements." When Mrs. Pierce was asked for a statement she referred the reporter to her daughter, Mrs. Hook, and said she does not know Mr. Hook's present whereabouts.

SLOPE BRIEFS.

Morphine Victim Identified.

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 30.—That James Bennett is the name of the young man brought to the Receiving Hospital suffering from an overdose of morphine, December 17 and who died later the same day, is the belief of Mrs. Rosena Bennett, who claims to be the mother of the boy.

Tobacco Dealers on Carpet.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—Eighteen tobacco dealers, arrested yesterday on charge of having sold cigarettes to boys under the age of 16 years, were arraigned today before Police Judge Weller. They pleaded not guilty and their cases were set for December 3.

Hero Rescues a Parrot.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—Responding to the shrieks of Mrs. Martha Fanning today, Patrolman Patrick Butler, risked his life by entering her burning dwelling, believing that the woman's child was in the house. He succeeded in rescuing a parrot, which had been the subject of Mrs. Fanning's lamentations.

Strenuous Simple Life.

REDDING, Nov. 30.—Living next to nature in a section where the thermometer went down to 30 deg. during the last few days, and where snow was flying, caused the farmers in Round Mountain section to be alarmed for the sanity of Frank Kelly, who was brought to this city yesterday by a constable.

WASHINGTON.

SHIPPERS MAKE GOOD SHOWING.

Flood of Witnesses Testify on Freight Increases.

Eastern Trunk Line Hearing Practically Ended.

Gross Over-Capitalization of Roads Charged.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Testimony in the eastern trunk line freight advance case was virtually concluded by the Interstate Commerce Commission today, after many witnesses for the shippers had agreed that the proposed increases would localize competition, hurt the western market for eastern goods and otherwise seriously interfere with their business.

The pending suspension of the proposed advances is until February and in the meantime, on January 9, the arguments of counsel will be made. The commission may be prepared to render its decision by the expiration of the present extension.

There was a steady run of witnesses today in support of the shippers' protests. They included heads of the Westinghouse Airbrake Company, the Railway Business Association, the American Locomotive Company and of shoe and leather, drug, cotton goods and other enterprises.

OVER-CAPITALIZATION ALLEGED.

Clifford Thorne of Washington, Iowa, State Railway Commissioner-elect, counsel for the Corn Belt Meat Producers' Association, and the Farmers and Grain Dealers' Association, contended that in four States alone the railroads had been over-capitalized by $400,000,000. This was based on statistical summary of the actual physical valeation of 135 properties, having a combined capitalization of more than $1,000,000,000.

Mr. Thorne contended that railway net earnings have been increasing faster than their expenses and that the credit of the roads was good. He urged that the only proof offered by the railroads to support their argument of credit impairment was that they could not market 4 per cent. bonds at par, an ability which he regarded as by no means indicative of bad credit. He said railroad securities are more desirable today than five, ten, fifteen or twenty years ago and command higher market prices than those of other public utility or industrial companies.

GET LITTLE CONSOLATION.

"Tell your troubles to the commissioner," President John Lawrence of the Lawrence Company of Boston and New York, testified was the only consolation he received from the railroads when he tried to talk to them about advances which meant $70,000 increased cost annually to his cotton piece goods business.

Edwin R. Fobes of Boston, candy manufacturers, contended that candy is a necessity and not a luxury. Attorney Butterfield, for the New York Central lines, forced him to say that he saw no reason why sugar, unaffected in the proposed advance and a big factor in the candy business, should not bear its share of the increase.

He said the increase would take off half of his quarter of a cent profit on the six and eight cents a pound candy, and that in the East his candy goods jobbed at 25 and 40 cents a pound, were sold by retailers at from 50 cents to $1.50 a pound.

WANTS REBATE AGAIN.

Charles L. Swartz of St. Louis, representing the National and Western Association of Shoe Wholesalers, testified that the increased cost would be put upon the dealers and that it would ultimately reach the consumers on certain medium and low grade shoes. He referred to the old rebate, "plums" which the railroads gave favored shippers until the Hepburn bill stopped these secret practices.

"Are any of these rebates still existing?" asked Commissioner Clements.

"I wish they were, under certain conditions."

"It is surprising to me," continued Mr. Clements, "to find now how extensive these rebate practices used to be when it was so hard then for us to find them at all."

ROOSEVELT MANHANDLED.

Rough Treatment Accorded Marble Bust of Former President.

[Associated Press Night Report.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Two workmen grasped Theodore Roosevelt by the head today, tilted him to one side, pulled the planks from under him and dropped him with a thud in front of the United States Senate Chamber. A colored man put his hand on the former President's face and twisted him around a bit.

"He looks hunchbacked," said a visitor in the Senate corridor.

"I never saw him look so fierce," said another.

"That is a characteristic pose," said a third.

It was a remarkable bust of the former President that submitted to all this rough treatment and comment. The statue of Roosevelt, with others, has been placed in the corridor because there is no room inside the chamber.

AMERICANS WIN.

WILL SUPPLY CHINESE LINE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—American bridge builders and manufacturers of locomotives and cars will profit by the re-construction of the railroad from Antung to Mukden in Manchuria, although the Japanese are building the road. The line, which served during the Russo-Japanese war for military uses, is being transformed into a standard guage railroad. American rolling stock is to be used and the bridges have been ordered from the United States because American manufacturers were able to supply them within the shortest time.

BETTER TRANSPORT SERVICE.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Improvements in the transport docks at San Francisco, at an estimated cost of $1,125,000, oil burning furnaces for the transports that will effect a saving of $50,000 a year on each vessel, and a 5,000,000 gallon reservoir at the Presidio, so that with its pumping plant the post will be independent of any private concern for water supply, is the programme Congressman Kahn will take up at once, first with the Secretary of War and then with the House Military affairs Committee of which he is a member. Kahn made an inspection of the transport wharfage facilities just before leaving San Francisco and is prepared to make an active campaign for the improvements. As to the burning of oil on transports he points out that the steaming radius will be increased from 3000 to 6000 miles, thus making it possible to make Hawaii a base for virtually the entire Pacific Coast.

NAVY ESTIMATE CUT.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The total estimates for the United States navy for the fiscal year 1911-1912, to be submitted to Congress as a basis for the appropriation for that year, amount to $126,046,659, or $5,000,000 less than appropriated for the current fiscal year. The figures include the estimates for first year's construction of new vessels contemplated by the Navy Department. The new ships proposed are: Two battleships, one collier, one gunboat, one river gunboat, two sea-going tugs, two submarines, and one submarine tender. Originally the department submitted estimates amounting to $127,016,159.24, including $13,209,928 for the new building programme.

GREAT EXPECTATIONS.

FINEST PLACE FOR AVIATION.

Bird Men Agree Los Angeles Will Become Center.

World Will Be Astounded by Feats in the Air.

Flight Records to Be Smashed at the Coming Meet.

"Without a doubt all world's records for flights through the air will be broken during the aviation meet scheduled to be held in Southern California next month," said Walter S. Brookins, one of the most noted bird men in the United States, who arrived at the Alexandria yesterday. Brookins is accompanied by Arch Hoxsey, also one of the world's great aviators. Both gentlemen are flying under the Wright brothers' colors, and are in this city to arrange for appearing at the aviation meet to be held here during January.

Arch Hoxsey, the Aviator, and His Mother, on the veranda of Mrs. Hoxsey's home in Pasadena. The noted birdman says that if arrangements are completed for Aviation Week he expects all records to be broken, owing to the perfect conditions for flying which exist in Southern California.

"There is no doubt in the minds of all well-informed aviators," said Brookins yesterday, "but that Los Angeles will eventually become the center of winter aviation of the world. The climate is beneficial, the air currents are just right, and the absence of all high winds is a great aid. One year ago, when the first American aviation meet was held in Los Angeles, the world was startled at the records made. This year, after a wonderful improvement in the machines themselves, and also the skill of the drivers, the world will again be astounded. We will literally fly all over Souther California, if we are given the chance."

Roy Knabenshue, manager for the Wright company, for which both Hoxsey and Brookins fly, arrived at the Van Nuys yesterday, and the trio spent the morning hours together. Knabenshue believes that arrangements will be made shortly whereby the two great bird men will appear at the aviation meet.

SEEING THE OLD FOLKS.

In the afternoon Brookins, who is a Pasadena boy, started for his home town and for the first visit to his mother since he won his spurs on the aviation field.

Mrs. Hoxsey lives in a pretty little cottage at No. 102 West Belview drive, Pasadena, and the first thing she knew of the arrival home of her son was when he burst through the door and rushed into her arms.

The greater portion of the afternoon was spent by Hoxsey in visiting old friends in Pasadena. He held little impromptu meetings on the street and at almost every corner when he encountered friends.

Mrs. Hoxsey, mother of the famous aviator, stated she always had a great desire to go up in a flying machine and one of the first requests she made of her son was that he take her up in his machine. He consented and promised that before he left for the East she should fly in his biplane.

A tentative move was made yesterday by a few residents of Pasadena to have Brookins and Hoxsey give an exhibition of flying at Tournament Park, Pasadena, during the next week. Roy Knabenshue, manager for the bird men, stated nothing definite could be stated now.

"I am glad to be back in Pasadena again," said Hoxsey. "It seems good to get home once more, and now I want to show the boys how I can fly. It would be the proudest moment of my life to fly over Pasadena and see what the Crown City looks like from the clouds. If I can arrange it I will try to do so in a few days. I do not know what arrangements have been made for me, but I just want to get one chance here and then I am willing to go to San Francisco or anywhere else.

NEVER AFRAID IN THE AIR.

"No, I never feel afraid. I have gone up in all parts of the country and in all kinds of weather. We never disappoint our people no matter where we are. The people pay to see us and they are entitled to get their money's worth.

"I was mighty proud to have the honor of taking Col. Roosevelt in the air when I was in St. Louis. You know I invited him through Gov. Hadley whom I knew, but Gov. Hadley said, 'no.' Then when I was flying around in the air at the aviation grounds, I saw Col. Roosevelt in his automobile and I made a landing very close to him, went to his automobile and shook hands with him, and said, 'I am sorry you could not accept my invitation, colonel, because I wanted to show you the inspiration of being in the air. 'When will you take me up,' he said, and I replied, 'Right now.' 'Alright,' he responded, and climbed down out of his automobile. 'I told him not to let on until he climbed in the machine.' Then it was all off and I took him for a four-mile spin. But you know I was very careful, and every one was pleased.

"I felt sad for poor Johnson. He and I were side partners and always together. We were always bantering each other while in the air. Whenever he did a new stunt I would do it and go him one better. That is the way we worked. When he fell I was in the air and saw him. I did not think he was hurt at first. I came right along over him and saw he was fast, and I came to the ground as soon as possible.

"Nobody knows just how it happened. I felt just as bad as any one could, but we were under contract to entertain the people and I went up again the next day while Walter Brookins went to Kansas City with Johnston's body. The next day in Denver was a fearful one. It rained, sleeted and snowed, but I made four flights and filled out contract."

WAITING FOR THE WORD.

"Unless we get a definite answer from the Los Angeles people within the week, we will probably put our machines back on the train and start for Dayton," said Knabenshue.

Brookins looked sorry at this declaration. "Pshaw, I'd hate to clear out after being only a few days here," he declared. "It would make me feel worse than not coming at all. There isn't any place that I've been so glad to get here. I'm always glad to reach a new territory where there are new sights to see, but here I am at home."

In relating many of his experiences with the people who come to see him, Brookins declared the near aviator is the greatest nuisance. "They all have some new scheme for stability of wings, some idea for a new model machine, or they want to know how they can get a start in the business. At first I used to stop and tell them all about it, but I got wise. Now I'm always busy, or if I do meet them, I've got an engagement in a few minutes. It weares more than flying itself."

PROUD OF WIFE, TRIES TO DIE.

PHILADELPHIA BROKER DARES NOT PUBLISH WEDDING.

Both Belong to Mystic "Order of Fifteen," Which Holds Marriage Is Matter of Affinity and He Is Afraid to Let Organization Know of Weakness.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It was learned today that Frank E. Alexander, the broker of this city who tried to kill himself by slashing his throat in a Baltimore hotel yesterday, and Miss Mary E. Kelly, with whose family he lived here, were married nearly eight months ago.

It was learned further from the lips of the newly disclosed Mrs. Alexander herself that both are members of the "Order of Fifteen," which created such a stir a few months ago. Baltimore physicians declare Alexander tried to take his life because he brooded over a clash between his actual manner of living and the ideals of the mystic order.

For months, it is said, he desired to make his marriage known. He loved his wife and was proud of her and he wished to announce to the world that he and the supposed Miss Kelly were really man and wife. The "Order of Fifteen," however, taught him that marriage was a matter of affinity and not of law.

To admit the marriage would have been, in the minds of the ardent adherents of the sect, to have admitted a fatal weakness which would have kept him from spiritual perfection. On the other hand, failure to comply with the laws of society would have brought his wife into contempt and social ostracism. To avoid conflict with the "Order" on the one hand and to protect his wife from the sneers of society on the other, Alexander kept the marriage a secret until the situation became unbearable.

Witnesses Hear That Foreign Steamship Companies Attempt to Influence Legislation Against Ship Subsidy, But When Pinned Down to Facts Turn Reticent.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—None of the witnesses who appeared today before the Congressional Committee investigating the charges that foreign steamship interests sought to defeat ship subsidy legislation at Washington would testify of his own knowledge that the companies had maintained a lobby.

Alexander R. Smith, secretary of the Barge Canal Terminal Commission, and formerly superintendent of the Marine Exchange, said that while he knew foreign steamship companies had representatives in Washington, he did not know of the existence of a lobby.

Mr. Smith testified there were several men in Washington who furnished newspapers with letters containing favorable reports on ship subsidy legislation. He did not know of the men who wrote letters to the newspapers opposing ship subsidy legislation except one connected with the Merchants' Association of New York.

William R. Corwin, secretary of the National Association of Clothing Manufacturers, who was formerly connected with the Merchants' Association of New York, testified he had absolutely no knowledge of any combination of foreign shipowners that sought to exert influence against passage of the legislation.

Lawson Sanford, secretary of the Transatlantic Conference, could give no details of the organization of the conference, and was instructed to bring before the investigators minutes of the meeting at which the conference was organized and other information.

Representative Olcott said Mr. Sanford was to be the most important witness before the committee.

THE STAGE.

Pavlowa a Poet's Dream; Mordkin Greek Statue.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

An English author recently said of Anna Pavlowa, "She laughs with the sweet seriousness of a nun taking the sunshine."

That was a wonderful expression about a wonderful woman.

It is hard to define the charm of this singular, ethereal little creature, who for nearly three hours completely dominated an audience of scarcely less than 3000 persons at the Auditorium last night.

The triumph of Pavlowa—as are the triumphs of all artists, whether actors or singers or dancers—is a triumph of complexity. Pavlowa has mastered the technique of dancing to its uttermost degree. In addition, she possesses the intensity of a great emotional actress. Further, she has a face and eyes which express with wonderful fidelity every shade of her emotions. And it is evident that she is a woman of the keenest intelligence; the surety with which she judges every effect, and anticipates every heart-throb of her audience, demonstrates that beyond a doubt.

The countenance of this 28-year-old Russian woman is essentially tragic. There is a haunting melancholy even in her smile, though that smile is quite irresistable.

Pavlowa is the center-piece around which this remarkable production revolves, but before going further let me say that as a whole it is, without doubt, the most remarkable exhibition of dancing which has ever been seen in America.

The entire affair is of extraordinary class, from the orchestra, with its eminent director, through the main body of the dancers, the solo dancers—the big body of mechanical assistants, even—to the two celebrities who are the human capstones of this structure of solid human motion.

Genee has been acclaimed the world's greatest ballet dancer. Maud Allan has been called the superlative interpreter of dancing emotions. But to my mind Pavlowa is greater than either, whereas Genee has all the technique she has little real feeling, while Allan, a throbbing poem of sentiment, is handicapped by having no technique whatever—in the professional sense of the word.

Now comes a little Russian who has both the technique of Genee and the superlative temperament of Miss Allan—Pavlowa. Pavlowa is the irresistible and invincible combination of the two.

Mordkin is the most beautiful man I have ever seen.

Anyone who has not looked on Mordkin, the semi-nude, those words are not fudgy, not to say sissy.

But Mordkin is the only male upon the stage to whom the word "beautiful" can be applied in its true sense, without the slightest reproach of effeminacy. His lines are those of a Greek statue. His face is the classic countenance of a pagan demi-god.

Theodore Stier has the art of conducting in a virile and magnetic manner without making himself in any manner conspicuous. And this is an accomplishment, believe me, that only a few of the celebrated baton-wielders possess. The orchestra, though numbering less than forty men, has the resonance and tonality of more than fifty.

The curtain last evening rose upon the ballet "Giselle," a poetic story of France under Louis XV. The ballet construction is by Theophile Gautier, with music by Adam. Briefly, it is the story of teh village lovers, and the royal preference for the beloved—resulting in this instance in the death of the girl, who falls lifeless upon the stage.

The second part of this ballet showed the most wonderful pantomimic dancing that Los Angeles has ever seen. In a dim forest vale it opens with a moonlight fairy dance, following which the corpse of the dead bride is raised from the grave and brought to life by the fairy queen. The girl dances in the moonlight with her lover, and as laying her back at last, lifeless and cold, upon her bier, is startled by a hand upon his shoulder, death overcomes him too and he falls beside her on the ground.

I wish I knew the technique of dancing, that I might describe the wonderful feats of Anna Pavlowa in this phase. Her toe dancing, her whirls, her pirouetting, the rush of her lithe body far aloft in Mordkin's arms, the frantic climaxes of both of them—all were individual moments of a long and dazzling enchantment.

The latter half of the evening was devoted to a series of dances of rare beauty, in which the chief star was Theodawa Pajittzkaia, an exquisitely beautiful woman who possesses just the assets which are opposite the charms of Pavlowa Pajittzkaia is a glorious creature of the senses, whereas Pavlowa is a poet's dream of soul.

The first was a Polish dance, and a setting of the Liszt Second Rhapsody, the whole company, which for dash and kindling enthusiasm were simply irresistable.

Then there were other wonderful dances by the two stars—an ancient affair, with bow and arrows, by the lithean-muscled Mordkin as set against the Saint-Saens pianissimo idyll, "The Swan," in which, almost floating in a sea of blue spotlight and silver sheen, Pavlowa seemed a sweet spirit from another world.

The costuming of this aggregation of dancers is magnificent. The scenery, while not elaborate, is thoroughly accountable, and the lighting is evidently in the hands of a group of masters.

This afternoon a new programme, with "The Arabian Nights" ballet, will be featured.

Tonight the programme of last evening will be given.

Oliver Morosco brought a trunkful of new plays back home, a number of which are by eminent authors. The name of Eugene Walter is mentioned here, though Mr. Morosco has not said that he has a Walter play for try-out purposes.

At any rate, the most importunate of the authorial wooers was C. T. Dazey, who has not always dined on ambrosia since the first glory of "In Old Kentucky" paled.

Dazey had a play he wished to read Mr. Morosco, and called him up steadily from 8 in the morning until 1 the following morning. At last the Los Angeles manager told him he never listened to plays as they were read, and bade him begone.

Quite undaunted, Mr. Dazey hired some hackey to slip his play into Mr. Morosco's portmanteau, and he just had to read it on the way home.

"So I did," said he, last night. "It is called 'Captain LaFitte,' after the famous New Orleans pirate of a century ago—and I'm blamed if it isn't the best piece of the whole new lot!"

This same Morosco brought back ten suits of Broadway clothes, and can be expected to sartorially dim any feminary who may appear upon his stages.

Last night Mr. Morosco demonstrated the new law of the Tuxedo, which does away with the Tuxedo hat and calls for the niftiest black-and-white stripes—all to match, if you please, in waistcoat, socks, tie, handerchief and scarf.

Lon Beasley, Brummelian wonder that he is, hid under his own automobile when he saw him coming, and Willie Ervast unconsciously tried to sell him a box.

The next production at the Burbank will be a comedy, "An American Widow," in which Virginia Harned made her biggest hit when she was here some time ago. Miss Marjorie Rambeau will have the Harned role, and Grace Travers will play her most successful part again, that of Madame Absloni. The comedy is a satire on the ease with which divorces are obtained.

This week at Levy's is a lively one. The bill opens with Jack Henderson, modern and popular songs. His talking song, "Life's a Funny Proposition After All," is given in a Cohanesque manner.

The Cosmopolitan Trio begin their work with a trio from "Il Trovatore," and was well received even after four weeks of Bevani Grand opera. Porcini's "Toreador Song," a baritone solo, showed the versatility of this singer and Anselm's tenor solo, "My Bride Shall be my Flag," was new and attractive. Helen Cole, the soprano, presented a dainty bit, "Cupid's Garden."

Sophie Tucker will introduce a song new to her public at Pantages tonight. It will be the first time the song will have been rendered and the singer expects it to add greatly to her reputation as an interpreter of a peculiar form of melody and words that could only originate among the darkies of the southern cotton fields. The title of the new song will not be given out in advance. Upon her appearance this week at Pantages she has been given a generous reception, showing that she still retains her hold upon the axections of Pantages patrons.

The bill for next week will consist of of the Baader-Lavelle troupe of circus gymnasts; Bigelow's Merry Youngsters in "School Time Frolics;" Guido Gialdini in a whistling specialty; Hamilton Bros., comedy acrobats; Romanelli, trick violinist; Finn and Ford, black face singing and dancing comedians and new moving pictures.

Edmund Day, one of the best known and most successful writers for the vaudeville stage today, will be represented at the Los Angeles Theater next week by his latest product, "200 Miles From Broadway," which will be offered by a team of clever players, Campbell and Yates. The scene of this humorous playet is laid in a near-hotel in a village in Vermont, where an actress has become stranded and is forced to take a position as waitress, where she meets a young and slangy bookmaker, who has escaped from New York on account of Gov. Hughes' crusade against the racetrack.

That the management of the Grand Operahouse announces is its biggest and most expensive royalty production of the year will be "Nearly A Hero," which Ferris Harman and his company will offer for the first time in the West and for the first time by a stock organization, Sunday afternoon.

"Nearly A Hero" is perhaps the best starring vehicle Sam Bernard ever appeared in and it will show Ferris Hartman in a German dialect role of Ludwig Knoedler, which will give him the best fun-making opportunities he has enjoyed this season. The play is not only a great fun show, but contains some of the catchiest musical numbers that have been found in a musical play of recent writing.

"Nearly A Hero" has been announced on several different occasions but on account of the inability to obtain the script and music owing to the express drivers strike, it had to be delayed. Keen interest is being shown in the production and unusually elaborate preparations are being made for its presentation.

The benefit given by the Theatrical Managers' Relief Association and the Theatrical Mechanics' Association will take place at the Auditorium tomorrow afternoon, and indications now are that the great Auditorium will be packed with people by the time the curtain rises on the first act at 1 o'clock. It has been found necessary to commence the performance at this hour owing to the extreme length of the programme, which now contains over twenty-five splendid numbers.

Every associated theater in the city will be represented, besides a number of other artists who have volunteered their services in this worthy cause. There is a steady demand for seats for the benefit, and the advance sale has reached large proportions. The seats are obtainable at the Auditorium box office.

WATCH LOS ANGELES.

Theatrical Managers Look This Way for New Productions, According to Visitor.

Joseph Brooks of New York, one of the prominent members of the Klaw and Erlanger theatrical entity arrived yesterday at the Alexandria after a tour of the Northwest. He is accompanied by Mrs. Brooks.

Mr. Brooks stated that his company is busily engaged erecting five new theaters in the Northwest, where it recently lost several theatrical houses. Mr. Brooks says that Los Angeles has gained a great name throughout the East as a producing center. He said that the larger theatrical managers are getting the habit of watching Los Angeles for new productions.

"One of the great difficulties we now have to encounter" said Mr. Brooks yesterday "is the rapid growth of the stock company and it's great inroads on the high-price traveling production. We will be compelled to solve this problem but at present we are worried about it a great deal. It may be solved by cheapening the traveling companies not in the production or the personnel of the company, but in the prices charged." Brooks will remain several days in Los Angeles looking into the local situation and will then return East by way of New Orleans.

TREASURERS' BALL.

Box Office Men and Players' Country Club to Unite in Big Dance to Be Given This Evening.

The "Actors' Ball," so-called, though it is really the big social function of the Theatrical Treasurers' Association each year, will be given tonight at the Goldberg-Bosley terpsichorean institution on South Flower street.

The grand march will start promptly at midnight, and according to present plans it will be led by the following couples: Lewis S. Stone and Marjorie Rambeau; A. Byron Beasley and Miss Eleanor Gordon; Mr. and Mrs. William Faversham, and Dick Ferris and Florence Stone.

David M. Hartford, stage director of the Burbank company, is floor manager.

"Billy" Arend will furnish the music. Floral decorations of very unusual elaborateness are being put up, and the programmes, embossed and printed in several colors, are of unique and original design, and altogether are almost unprecedented in dancing annals hereabouts.

WOMEN CROSS CENTURY MARK

Hope to Dedicate Building on New Year.

Success to Be Marked by Complimentary Banquet.

Never was there so enthusiastic a meeting held at the Young Women's Christian Association as that of the campaign committees, at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

It was the day of special effort to clear off the debt of the association, and particularly to complete the list of 100 women who have subscribed $1000 each to the building fund. The plan to secure $100,000 in this way was started by Mrs. W. J. Chichester, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, in February, 1907, and she has never ceased the effort, nor lost faith in its accomplishment. Last night she was more than rewarded for the tenacity she displayed in clinging to her purpose, in the face of some discouragement, for when the returns were all in, it was found that there are 163 women on the list.

The two chaffing gentlemen friends of Mrs. Chichester, who thought it a great joke to promise a banquet to the 100 women when they had come forward with their subscriptions, are now warned to get ready for the feast, and to prepare for 110, for others are in sight. There was great rejoicing over the result last night, and following is a complete list of all those who have subscribed $1000 each to the fund, five of whom have died since they subscribed:

DOING A BIG WORK.

The committee of 100, with Mrs. Giles Kellogg as chairman, in search of $100 subscriptions yesterday, also reported thirty of them on the list at the close of the day's effort.

On November 1 the debt on the half-million plant of the association was $60,000, and at the close of yesterday $26,000 of this amount had been secured, leaving $34,000 yet to be provided. So certain is Miss Cora L. Tatham, the general secretary, that this will be secured that she said last night:

"We expect to dedicate the building free of debt, on New Year's Day. While the month's effort has produced a little more than $26,000, others have given us such encouragement that we believe the whole amount will be easily secured during December, and with such bright prospects and good deal of faith, we hope to accomplish the dedication as a New Year's gift to the generous people of the city. Our committees have been received with uniform courtesy, and the greatest interest has been shown in our work and we are filled with gratitude.

"While yesterday was a special day, we have no idea of ceasing our efforts and the campaign will be pressed with vigor during the next month. We hope to land a number of large subscriptions and enough smaller ones to clear off everything we owe."

The membership of the association is now over 6000, but, while it fluctuates somewhat, it never gets far away from that figure. There were 202 applicants during the month of, November, just in the regular course of business at the membership desk, and it is peculiar that 101 of them had been in the city less than six months, and sixty of them less than one week. The latter shows that the greatest association in the world has been heard of away from home.

The annual bazaar of the Hermosa Club will be held in the room of the Senior Club today, beginning at 10:30 a.m. and closing at 9 p.m. All kinds of fancy articles suitable for Christmas gifts will be on sale.

BRAKEMAN LOSES LIFE.

Found Crushed Near Track at Oban. Train Crew Care for Him on Long Journey.

Missed from his train when it reached Lancaster, yesterday, U. Sidney Walters, a Southern Pacific freight brakeman, was found lying near the track at Oban, six miles from Lancaster, crushed and unconscious.

He was placed on the train which proceeded to Mojave where it was expected a physician would be found to attend to his injuries. This did not prove to be the case, and the train continued on to Bakersfield. Walters, who was tenderly cared for on the long journey by his companions, was too far gone by the time a Bakersfield doctor was summoned to respond to treatment and died at 8 o'clock last night.

Just how Walters lost his life is wrapped in mystery. He was known to be a careful man, and two suppositions are open, either that he lost his footing while passing from one car to another, or was knoked off in a fight with hoboes.

FORCED TO PAWN HIS COFFIN.

ATLANTA (Ga.) Nov. 30.—The high cost of living today forced M. L. Bremen to pawn his coffin. Some time ago he bought it for his own use, because he could "pick it up at a bargain." Today, however, he needed some money, and not having anything else, he had the coffin carted to a pawnshop.

ATTELL EATS MOORE ALIVE.

Hebrew Champ Wins All the Way from Pal.

Both Men Are Knocked Down During Bout.

Abe Ten Pounds Lighter Than Opponent.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Abe Attell of San Francisco easily defeated Pal Moore of Philadelphia in a ten-round bout at the Fairmont Athletic Club tonight.

It was a poor match. Moore was outclassed from the start by the featherweight champion and at the last bell Attell's only mark was a slight trickle of blood from the nose, while Moore's face was terribly bruised and both his eyes were closed.

Attell forced the pace in the first round and sent a couple of hard left hooks to the face. Moore came back with a few left hooks to the body, but they were without steam. In the second Attell played for the stomach and jaw, and was all over his opponent.

Moore came back in the third with left to the body, but made no impression on Attell, who kept up a series of cutting left jabs to the face and head. In the fourth Attell shot a right to the jaw and Moore went down for the count. Abe's nose was bleeding and Moore's eyes were puffed up at the bell.

Moore surprised the crowd in the seventh by opening up and putting Attell down with a right swing. He sat in the middle of the ring with his legs crossed, laughing, waiting for the count of nine, when he sprang to his feet. Infighting characterized the last of the round.

In the eighth both Moore's eyes were closed and he was bleeding profusely. The ninth was all Attell's although Moore was game. Moore landed left and rights to the head in the tenth round, bringing blood from Attell's nose. This angered the champion, and he fought furiously for a knockout, but without avail.

Attell weighed in shortly before the fight at 133 pounds in his street clothes, probably ten pounds lighter than Moore, who weighed in in fighting togs and just failed to move the beam.

JEM MACE DEAD.
FAMOUS FIGHTER PASSES.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, Nov. 30.—"Jem" Mace, the hero of many prize-fights, died at Hayrow-on-Tyne of old age today. He was in his seventy-ninth year. Mace was at one time worth more than $1,000,000, but of recent years he had been dependent upon friends. Occasionally he had appeared in music hall exhibitions.

"Jem" Mace was born at Beeston, in Norfolk, and in his day was one of the greatest boxers. His first great fight was with Bill Thorpe, whom he beat in eighteen rounds. When Tom Sayers retired from the championship in 1860, Mace was regarded as his legitimate successor, but his supremacy was soon challenged by Tom King. They met in January, 1862, when after a forty-three-round contest, Mace was given the verdict. For the next ten years he was practically invincible.

OLD FRIEND TALKS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 30.—News of the death of "Jem" Mace was received here today with sorrow by "Bill" Clark, better known as the "Belfast Chicken," who was Mace's sparring partner more than sixty years ago.

"We were the two oldest prize-fighters in the world," said Clark. "I am 76 years old and he was 78. Twenty-five years ago we gave a benefit match in New York, and it was hard to tell which of us two old fellows got the worst of the battle.

"When 'Jem' and I met we were like two little lads, but we knew how to land a good blow and win a fight. I became a boxer because I had to support my mother and her six children. Jem was a natural born fighter, so we tied up for two years. He knew more about boxing than any man on earth except me, because I learned all he ever knew before we were together a week. We had a rule for boxing. It was to land a left-hander at the right time and in the right place. That's how we won.

"I once fought Jem a ninety-round go at Greenwood Court. That day we fought until we could not stand up and when the constables brokeup the fight Jem got away with the money. That was the last I saw of him until we had that bout in New York about twenty-five years ago."

AMATEUR BOXING.
CONTESTS NEXT MONTH

Boxing is to be revived at the Naud Junction pavilion on Dec. 9 when Manager McCarey intends to put on an amateur show that will be the best of its kind ever presented here for it will be the first of its kind. The entertainment will conform to the new ordinance passed by the council concerning boxing bouts in the city limits.

The general proposition is to have three four-round bouts and four six-round contests but no programme has been arranged yet and none of the fighters have been selected, notwithstanding reports to the contrary in some of the local sheets. Big seven-ounce pillows are to be used by the boxers and the "kidney punch" will be barred. The boys are to fight from four to ten rounds, must be examined as to their physical condition and the prize offered for the winner in each event will be a medal not to exceed $25 in value.

An amateur is defined as a boxer who has not taken part in a professional contest for a championship at his weight and who will accept only a medal or trophy in any bout in which he may participate. Amateur boxers in good standing may join the amateur branch of the Pacific Athletic Club and will thereafter be eligible to take part in any amateur show given by the club. The referee shall be instructed to stop all bouts when a winner is apparent or when one of the contestants is in such a weakened condition that harm might result to him. No boxer under seventeen years of age shall be allowed to take part in any contest.

Gardner Beats Klaus.

BOSTON, Nov. 30.—Jimmy Gardner, of Lowell, who lays claim to the middleweight championship, clearly outboxed and badly defeated Frank Klaus of Pittsburgh, before the Boston club last night. Gardner was given the decision at the end of 12 rounds of fast boxing. At no time had a lead.

AFTER PRIZE FIGHTERS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—J. E. White, attorney for the church federation, will swear to a complaint and the district attorney's office will prosecute "Battling" Nelson and Owen Moran on a charge of having engaged in a prize fight here last Saturday. This was the substance of a communication sent to White today by District Attorney Fickert.

In the letter, Fickert suggested that White confer with Asst.-Dist. Attorney E. A. Lane with regard to prosecution of the two fighters and their seconds for engaging in the match which resulted in the defeat of Nelson by a knockout in the eleventh round.

Asst.-Dist Attorney Lane declared that his office was anxious to establish a precedent and that he would willingly assist in the prosecution for the church federation providing that it would consent to produce sufficient evidence on which to base the complaint.

NEW MARK FOR MIDDLE ROUTE.

BUBBLING WATER MAKES RECORD ON OAKLAND TRACK.

Cuts Time for Mile and Seventy Yards Made by Four Different Horses—Surprises Are Many for Four Skates Overlooked by the Talent Win for the Bookies.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OAKLAND, Nov. 30.—Bubbling Water, in winning the Sombrero handicap at Emeryville today, established a new world's record for a mile and seventy yards, running the distance in 1:42 1-5.

The previous mark of 1:42 2-5 was held by Kings Daughter, Grania, Ida May and Tony Bonero, the first two over the Fort Erie track and the latter two at Latonia. Bubbling Water carried 121 pounds and after suffering interference, beat Chester Krum a head.

Surprises were frequent, Dacia, Domithilda and Tillinghast being outsiders to land. Garner rode three winners. Results:

Five furlongs: Dacia (Garner,) won; Mading (Kirschbaum,) second; Ayame (Van Dusen,) third. Time, 1:00 1-5.

Prestolite, Eddie Mott, Media, Maxdice, Zlata Brana, Rob Chocolate, Fontello and Lizard also ran.

Futurity course: Domithilda (Hewitt,) won; Miss Sly (McCarthy,) second; Galene Gale (Rosen,) third. Time, 1:09 4-5. Lofty Heywood, Directello, Silk, Young Belle, Camera, El Molino and Passenger also ran.

Six furlongs: Tillinghast (Garner,) won; John W. Sheehan (Kirschbaum,) second; Home Run (D. McCarthy,) third. Time, 1:13. No Quarter, Native Sons, Hooray, Lord of the Forest, Braxton, Milpitas, Sir Fretful, Lady Galveston and J. H. Barr also ran.

Sombrero handicap, mile and seventy yards: Bubbling Water (Mentry,) won; Chester Krum (Glass,) second; Arasee (Van Dusan,) third. Time, 1:42 1-5. Eddie Graney and Black Mate also ran.

Mile: Corbin (Garner,) won; Tony Faust (Archibald,) second; Treasure Seeker (Pickens,) third. Time, 1:41. Great Caesar, Sir Wesley, El Paisano and Miss Greenwood also ran.

Futurity course: Sona (Pickens,) won; Minnedocia (Jahnsen,) second; Cante (Buxton,) third. Time, 1:10. New Caital, Alaxie, Electrowan, Alder Gulch, Fereno, Lord Clinto, Queen Full and Ilex also ran.

JACKSONVILLE CARD.
AYLMER WINS FEATURE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

JACKSONVILLE (Fla.) Nov. 30.—Cold, disagreeable weather held the attendance down to the regulars at Moncrief this afternoon. The Pablo selling stakes, value $1000 went to Aylmer. Results:

Five and one-half furlongs: Imprint, won; Duenner, second; Grover Hughes, third; time, 1:08 4-5.

Six furlongs: Start Charter, won; Aldrian, second; Antener, third; time, 1:13 2-5.

Six furlongs: T. M. Green, won; Beasm, second; Jack Parker, third; time, 1:12 3-5.

Mile and a furlong: Aylmer, won; My Gal, second; Compston, third; time, 1:54 1-5.

Seven furlongs: Descomnets, won; Ben Double, second; Buck, third; time, 1:27 3-4.

JUAREZ STRUGGLES.
ROYAL CAPTIVE NOT TRYING.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CIUDAD JUAREZ (Mex.) Nov. 30.—In a very close and exciting finish Ocean Queen won the feature event, a handicap at six furlongs at Terrazas Park today. Her advantage in the early part of the running gave her the race as The Wolf came fast and was only beaten by a head. Royal Captive performed very poorly. Results:

Six furlongs: Florence, won; Joe Woods, second; Pilan, third; time, 1:15.

Six furlongs, selling: Napa Nick, won; Elder, second; Flying Pearl, third; time, 1:14 1-5.

Five furlongs, selling: Roberta, won; Sir Barry, second; Deerfoot, third; time, 1:01 3-5.

Six furlongs, handicap: Ocean Queen, won; The Wolf, second; Royal Captive, third; time, 1:12 2-5.

Five furlongs, selling: Gilpy, won; Creaston, second; Lady Elizabeth, third; time 1:00 2-5.

PENSACOLA RESULTS.
NAG BOLTS THROUGH FENCE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PENSACOLA (Fla.) Nov. 30.—Completes' bolting through the outer fence in the closing dash was the main incident of today's racing. The jockey escaped injury. The officials suspended Martin and Davenport for the rest of this week for rough riding.

Wrispen and Howard also were punished by having their riding restricted to their contract employers for the rest of the week. Because of the lateness in starting the races here only five events will be offered hereafter. Results:

Five furlongs: Nora Emma won; Lodestone second; Bodkin third; time, 1:05 2-5.

Six furlongs: Eva Tanguay won; Inflection second; Autumn Girl third; time, 1:19.

Six furlongs: Our Nugget won; Horicon second; St. Dunstan third; time 1:18 2-5.

Five and one-half furlongs: Fundamenta won; Star Venus second; Stafford third; time, 1:06.

Mile and a sixteenth: Woodstone won; Brougham second; Vanen third; time, 1:54 4-5.

MOTOR-CAR EXHIBIT.

SHRINE AUDITORIUM TO HOLD MOTORDOM'S GEMS.

ONE of the most lavish displays ever planned for an automobile show has been chosen for the motor salon to be held in Shrine Auditorium the week of December 12 to 17. From early yesterday morning until late last night the committee received decorators and electric fixture experts, who are to make the interior of the big hall a garden of beauty, the background for the best motordom has to exhibit.

Suspended from the ceiling is a hanging garden of large proportions. This is to be unique and one of the features which should hold the thousands who are expected to visit the show. No expense is being spared that is necessary to make the exhibit all the committee desires it should be. The immense flood of light is to be softened by frosted globes on thousands of incandescents and the interior of the big pavilion is to be pleasing to the eye.

Theer will be models of all the latest cars of the dealers interested in this show. Touring cars, roadsters, runabouts, limousines and landaulets in the newest styles which the East has to show are to be grouped together on the floor of the Shrine Auditorium. Not only will there be many styles of American made m[illegible] but there will also be a number and [illegible] makes.

One of the chief centerpieces of the display to be made by the Kissel-Kar people is the automobile which won the Los Angeles-Phoenix road race. This car, with the asme scars it received in the battle across the sands, will be on exhibition.

Business men will be much interested in the exhibit of commercial vehicles. The latest motor trucks, vehicles which have made good under the most severe tests, will be shown. There will be at least a half dozen well-known trucks with a carrying capacity of at least three tons. Smaller ones with a single ton capacity and fitted with stylish bodies will be displayed.

The light delivery trucks which are to take the place of the horse-drawn vehicles ere long, will also be seen in larger numbers than ever before. This truck, which has become one of the most important features of the automobile trade, is being shown in models never before exhibited in an automobile display in the West.

From now until the opening date the committeemen are to be kept on the jump hustling everything into position. The cars are being hastened across the country and several dealers have gone to great expense to bring the machines here quickly. These cars are to form the gems of the big setting of motors cars and all are expected in time for the night of opening.

CAN'T STOP RENTING.

All right come to me and I'll rent you a new bungalow. Pay me $50 for the first month and then $25 per month and when your rent receipts amount to $1050 plus 7 per cent. interest on my investment (interest grows smaller each month) I'll give you a deed and clear title to the property. Even it up! You can sell for more than the $1050 as the property is advancing in value, thereby getting all your rent money back and interest. Can you figure out any better system of saving than this? The $1050 bungalow is 3 rooms, plastered, 10x16, cement walks, gas and water.

I have a 4-room bungalow at $1175 and others up to $2500. Don't throw away your rent receipts when they can be had worth face value the same as a certificate of deposit.

Let me show you the property.

FOR SALE— LAND THAT WILL REALLY PAY.

Here is land you have been looking for—rich, well watered, low in price—only 9 miles to city of Fresno, crossed by the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe Railways, each having a station at the tract. The rich soil is abundantly watered. Ditch water costing $1.50 per acre per year. Water for pumping can be had at only 18 feet, from pumps already installed on the water goes with the land. Here is a proven alfalfa proposition, and conditions are equally favorable for corn, tobacco, peaches, apricots, vegetables and berries, for peanuts, figs, walnuts, and for general farming. Dairying and poultry raising will do well here. Good markets are close at hand, with excellent shipping facilities. This is a well settled community. There is a good town right at the property, with schools, stores, telephones, free rural delivery, etc. The advantages of a large city are just a few minutes' ride by train. No land can be bought for $40 an acre up, and you can buy it with crops already growing, if you wish. Under cultivation it will pay for itself. Come in and see our handsome exhibit of products. Get my illustrated booklet, and full information concerning my free excursions.

FOR SALE—

DON'T BUY

AN ORANGE GROVE

SIMPLY BECAUSE YOU GET IT CHEAP.

It isn't economy in the long run or good sense in the short run. I have one of the choicest 10 acre groves in California. It's worth $25,000, but $20,000 takes it. If you will allow us to retain present crop can make a big reduction from $20,000. This property has paid the present owner 15 per cent. and more for years. Drink your claret and have him estimate the present crop on the trees and see with your own eyes the returns you can figure on for this investment. 1850 large fine trees. Thoroughly fumigated and fertilized and has always been kept up to top notch of productiveness. Is located in Pomona close to schools, churches and street cars. A country home with every city improvement. Abundance of cheap water. Has good modern house, outbuildings, fruits, lawn, flowers, family orchard, etc. (no chicken coop with handle. Balance long time. Will consider clear Los Angeles to $5000 in part payment.

FOR EXCHANGE—

PALATIAL WEST END HOME

This especially well-planned residence, located in one of the most exclusive private parks in Los Angeles, improved with broad streets, wide parkings and ornamental lights, which are LIGHTED every evening, was built for a home, but owing to reverses the owner is compelled to dispose of it. No expense was spared to make this house ideal both in plan and construction. The first floor consists of a large and spacious living room, library, den, conservatory, dining room, kitchen and maid's room with bath. There are four large sleeping rooms, with bathe on the second floor, and on the third floor is a billiard room and another maids room. Off of the second floor is a large sleeping porch. The woodwork on the first floor and in one sleeping room on second floor is mahogany finish, rubbed down to the smoothness of a piano finish, and the rest of the house is white enameled equally as well finished. The electric fixtures were especially designed and are in keeping with the rest of the house. Furnace and Ruud heater in basement, which is large and airy. The one particular feature of this house which will appeal to every housewife is the number and size of the closets. Every bit of available space has been utilized and there is ample storage room for everything. The lot is 70 feet wide, with a side depth. In the rear is a garage, not a shed, it has a cement floor, is ceiled and is large enough to accommodate two machines. In fact, nothing has been omitted to make this residence well nigh perfect. Mortgage $8000, to exchange equity for clear city lots or beach property. This house is cheap.

WHO CAN TELL?

OLIVE BRANGH MAY BE WAVED.

Barney Oldfield May Be Taken Back Into Fold.

Outlaw Motor Speedsters Ready for Ascot.

What action will the American Automobile Association take at its annual meeting at New York today to offset the Independence race movement started by Barney Oldfield, the world's speed king, on the Pacific Coast?

Auto fans all over the country are asking this question and with sentiment divided the developments in the struggle will be watched with the keenest interest.

There seems to be one course left for the controlling body and that is the further disqualification of Barney, but whether that would be a wise move or not in view of the driver's popularity, is a question.

In many sections of the country, especially in the States far distant from New York, where the American Automobile Association is known in name only to those most intimately connected with the racing sport, Barney Oldfield will wield a powerful influence and probably will be instrumental in creating a feeling that will eventually cause a split in the ranks.

Oldfield received several telegrams from automobile factories yesterday and from race drivers in which he was assured of support in his plans to run race meets independent of the three "A's."

Lewis Strang, the famous racing pilot, wired Oldfield as follows:

"Accept my congratulations on the determined stand you have taken to race at Independent meets. You not only have made, but have kept alive, the circular track racing in America and deserve all credit for the popularity it enjoys. You will win out I know and if I can help you, command me."

The first big meet independent of the A.A.A. will be run at Ascot Park December 10 and 11. Not only will Oldfield go after all the world's short-distance circular dirt track marks, but he will also enter his trio of world's fastest stock machines in the different events on the programme.

With only Barney and his racing stable present the fans and followers of auto racing would be repaid for their trip to Ascot. In view of these conditions Oldfield will start his campaign of independent racing under the most favorable conditions.

From the viewpoint of the general sporting public Oldfield's stand for better conditions in auto racing is sure to work out a benefit. Several heads are to come off at the meeting of the powers-that-be in New York today.

Here in Los Angeles the average auto fan doesn't care much what happens. Oldfield is given credit for the racing enthusiasm that exists in this city. He is the only driver who shares his time equally between the East and West and who spends his own money to bring his big racing cars to the Coast for the winter meets.

There is a rumor that President Lewis R. Spears will resign from the A.A.A. at the meeting this afternoon. Just what effect this would have on the reinstatement of Oldfield no one can even guess. S. M. Butler, chairman of the Contest Board, is known to be favorable toward Barney. The other two members who also favor the reinstatement of the outlaw motorist are not in New York, and may not reach there until the latter part of the week. Fred Wagner and S. B. Stevens are hurrying East, but do not expect to take part in any controversy regarding the Oldfield matter until December 30.

NEW BOWLING TOURNEY.

Members of Los Angeles Athletic Club Are Lined Up for Play Tuesday Night.

With eight two-men teams entered, the bowling supremacy of the Los Angeles Athletic Club will be fought out this month in a tournament, which will open on the Grand alleys next Tuesday night.

With sixteen of the best bowlers of the club entered in this tourney and with not only the question of club supremacy, but with a number of handsome prizes to stimulate interest in the affair, the coming tournament promises to be decidedly interesting from start to finish. The several teams have been picked with the idea of making the affair practically an even one throughout.

Snyder and Hermann, Kimmerle and Nest, Welton and Guernsey, McDowell and Fay, McQuigg and Newhardt, Best and Mellus, Cooper and Simpson and Routzahn and Helmer make up the contesting teams. Each team will bowl three games on Tuesday and Thursday nights, the finish to be Tuesday evening, December 27.

SWIMMING IS POPULAR.

Statistics Show That Water Sport Has More Followers at Yale Than Other Pastimes.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Swimming is the most popular form of athletics at Yale, according to the report of Prof. William G. Anderson, director of the University gymnasium. Of the 3300 students enrolled at Yale, nearly 2000 take part in some branch of athletics.

The men are divided among the various sports as follows:

Swimming, 600; squash, 150; lawn tennis, 115; handball, 100; running, 80; football, 50; cross country running, 75; track athletics, 65; basketball, 40; baseball, 25; soccer, 25; golf, 20; gymnastics, 25; fencing, 15; boxing, 40; wrestling, 40; bowling, 70; trap shooting, 25.

FAVOR SUNDAY SPORTS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Delegates gathered here for the Methodist National Conference for Social Service were told today by one of their number that Sunday baseball and motion pictures now under the ban of the Metohdist church, were all right and should have the official sanction.

Dr. Edward A. Peterson of Goodrich House, Cleveland O., was the advocate of Sunday amusements. Rev. Dr. Peterson said:

"I believe laws against Sunday games, for people, are a bad thing and should be repealed. They are dead letters in most places, and a constructive policy should be adopted for recreation on this workingman's day.

"Where we forbid play we make Sunday a day of idleness for most young people."

In reply, Herbert Welsh, president of Ohio Wesleyan University, who was presiding said:

"Why, if the book of Methodist laws had been on this reading desk and heard that, I would have expected it to crawl to the edge and fall over."

Rev. J. H. Williams of Riverside made the most vigorous attack on Dr. Peterson's proposition, saying:

"I don't believe in trying to mix the work of the church with Sunday baseball. Even in the attempt of the Young Men's Christian Association to combine athletics with spiritual work, nothing but failure results."

MORE MEDALS PROMISED.

Umpires in American League Are to Be Given Diamond Buttons, Same as Phillies.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—President Johnson, of the American League, yesterday announced there would be diamond buttons for the four umpires who participated in the world's series, just the same as for the twenty-three members of the victorious Philadelphia team. In the past the National Commission has limited the jewelry to the players, manager and owner of the winning team.

This new departure will provide for emblems for Hank O'Day, Charles Rigler, Tom Connolly and Jack Sheridan, the arbiters, as well as for President Ben Shibe and Manager Connie Mack of the Athletics, and President Thomas J. Lynch of the National League.

The emblems will be forwarded to the players and officials within a few days, according to President Johnson.

HOPPE IN FORM.

Young Billiard Expert Has Very Easy Time in His Match With Amateur Champion.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—Willie Hoppe won his match with Joseph Mayer, the amateur billiard champion, here tonight by 18000 to 1086, playing 18.1 to his opponent's 18.2. In the final game Hoppe ran out his 400 with an unfinished run of 123 to his credit.

Mayer's score was 222 and his highest run was 65. Hoppe's average was 22 7-17 and Mayer's 13 14-16.

ARROYOSIDERS MEET.

Residents Along the Canyon-Like Stream Organize for Their Mutual Interest.

Last night a meeting of the business men and property owners of the northeast section of the city, known as Arroyoside, was held at the office of the Arroyoside Foram, No. 5822 Pasadena avenue. It was for the purpose of effecting a representative organization with a view of drawing together the various communities from the Elysian Hills to South Pasadena.

Representatives from Avenue 20 to Avenue 64, including Occidental Park, Highland Park, Garvanza and other tracts were present. The meeting was called to order by President List of the Highland Park Bank. Professor L. A. Handley, formerly of Occidental College was nominated temporary chairman with Robt. H. Lindsay, secretary.

After a large number of more or less appropriate names were suggested for the proposed organization the "Arroyo Seco Chamber of Commerce" was unanimously chosen as the title for this new "boosting" organization.

A committee of seven members was appointed to prepare articles of incorporation and to report at the next meeting, Tuesday, December 6. The committee consisted of one member from each improvement association in the Arroyoside district.

It is the purpose of the chamber to eliminate local lines and to co-operate with the various improvement associations in the territory from South Pasadena to Avenue 20.

CALL LIBRARY ELECTION.

Alhambra City Trustees Submit Forty-five Thousand Dollar Issue to Town's Voters.

ALHAMBRA, Nov. 30.—The voters of Alhambra will soon have the opportunity of deciding whether they will vote bonds for a new library building and site or continue to use the recently acquired quarters on North First street. The Board of City Trustees has adopted a resolution calling an election to vote bonds in the sum of $45,000 for the purchase of a new site and the erection of a new library building and including a resolution for the sale of the present site. The present site at Chapin and Main street approximately 200x200 feet, was purchased for $7000 four years ago and has increased materially in value since. The proposed site to be purchased if the bond election carries is situated on West Main street between Fourth and Fifth streets and is approximately 200 by 300 feet. At the time the original site was purchased it was very near the geographical center as well as the center of population, but since that time the city limits have been extended and the desire of the board seems to be to locate the library in a more central place.

H. D. Dee has been appointed driver of chemical engine No. 1 to succeed F. C. Wells, resigned.

RETURNS QUICK INVESTMENT.

ONTARIO, Nov. 30.—Another instance of quick money making on Ontario investments came to light today. A small fortune was cleaned up when the Ontario Hardware Company sold the Osborn Block, a two-story brick building at Euclid avenue and B street, for $31,000. Just three months ago the sellers bought this property from Pollock and Freeman for $21,000.

The buyers are Fallis Bros., who will remodel the lower floor of the building and move their department store from its present location at No. 123-125 N. Euclid to the new location.

An early fire at the I. W. Whittaker residence, No. 125 West D street, which originated in a wood shed was extinguished by the quick work of the fire department. It originated in a pile of peach pits stacked in the shed.

Frank N. Shaw,

turf and mining man, who has been mysteriously missing since Tuesday evening.

WHERE?

MINING MAN VAINLY SOUGHT.

MISSING FROM HIS HOME SINCE TUESDAY.

Friends Visit Hospitals, But Fail to Find Trace of Him—Former Owner of String of Race Horses, Which Made Him Especially Well Known in New York and Chicago.

Frank N. Shaw of No. 1721 South Flower street, 62 years of age, veteran turfman and mining man, walked out into the night Tuesday evening. What has become of him since remains a deep mystery despite the utmost efforts to find the missing man made by the police, his charming young wife and several hundred friends.

"Suppose you meet me downtown and we go to the theater together," was the gist of a telephone message sent to Mrs. Shaw by the missing man at about 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening. Mrs. Shaw demurred, preferring to pass the evening quietly at home, and, after some little discussion, the telephone conversation came to an end with the statement by Mr. Shaw that he would soon be at home.

Instead of going home, however, Mr. Shaw went to the Pacific Athletic Club office in the Wilson building, where he remained with T. J. McCarey until 8:30 o'clock in the evening.

That was the last seen of him.

Mr. Shaw, although so well provided for financially that he is frequently referred to as a wealthy man, carried no money with him Tuesday night, which eliminates the likelihood of his having come to harm at the hands of robbers. He never drank, but was a man of regular habits, devoted to his handsome young wife, and so quiet in manner that none who knew him would for a single instant entertain the thought that he might have been hurt in a fight. The accident theory is discredited by the fact that Mr. McCarey and other friends visited every hospital in the city yesterday and also every institution in the county, and nowhere was there a patient who might be so much as mistaken for the missing man.

"I could not imagine any reason for Mr. Shaw's disappearance," said Mrs. Shaw to The Times last night. "It is true that he is 62 years of age, but he does not look more than 50, and in disposition he was as young as any man of 40, besides which he enjoyed excellent health, having fully recovered from an apoplectic stroke he suffered about three years ago.

"Well—since you mention it—he did have another stroke of apoplexy before that, but that was ten years ago, and he seemed to have fully recovered from the effects of the last one. He always took excellent care of himself, and he had no bad habits, so that I do not think it would be likely that he would have fallen sick anywhere. We were married thirteen years ago, and we always got along together like two children. He was like a big boy when he was with me—"

She was trying hard to be brave but her lips trembled and tears shone in her great, dark eyes. Whatever else might be, it was clearly to be seen that it was not from her that Shaw had tried to escape. When she spoke of her long married life, the newspaper man was betrayed into a start, so young did she look. She seems not yet twenty-five.

Into hotels and restaurants, clubs and cigar stores, the hunt was carried all day yesterday and even late last night. Tom McCarey, heading one party in an automobile, visited personally all hospitals and other places which might be likely to reveal a trace of the missing man. At the Angelus and the Hollenbeck Hotels, clerks and bellboys looked up with interest when the name was mentioned, then they shook their heads gloomily. They all knew the kindly mining man who always greeted them with a smile and a pleasant word, but they had not seen him since Tuesday evening. Every member of the Pacific Athletic Club, practically, devoted much of his time to looking for Frank Shaw, but it was all in vain. The police sought to find some trace of him at the railroad offices, thinking that perhaps the man had become temporarily deranged, mentally, and boarded a train, but no ticket clerk in the city could remember selling a ticket to any one who looked like Frank N. Shaw.

At midnight, last night, mystery of the man's disappearance was as deep as ever.

Frank N. Shaw is especially well-known in New York and Chicago, where he figured conspicuously on the turf as the owner of a fine string of race horses. He came to Los Angeles with his young wife about five years ago and had settled down here. His chief recreation was bridge whist, of which he was passionately fond, but he never lost much at the game, and even if he had, he could well have afforded it.

Mr. Shaw is also interested in a mining property at Parker, Ariz., with Wyatt Erp, well-known in mining circles. Mrs. Shaw, however, explained last night that it would have been impossible fro her husanbd to go to the mine, as the only train he might have taken to go to Parker before or after his disappearance left Tuesday. Mrs. Erp left on this train to join her husband Tuesday, and she was accompanied to the station by Mrs. Shaw herself.

"And then," said Mrs. Shaw, "He never would have dreamed of taking a trip without letting me know. He always telephoned me three or four times a day when he was away from home."

Mr. Shaw is described as about five feet ten inches high, and weighing about 175 pounds. He wore a heavy head of sandy gray hair and a blonde mustache cut in "shoebrush" style. He was dressed in a blue serge coat and trousers with a fancy vest of rather loud color and generally wore gloves. His hat was a black telescope, and his tie was green and blue, with a coral pin. He also wore a signet ring with his initials, "F. N. S."

COMPLETES CHARTER DRAFT.

Document Prepared by Committee in Santa Monica to Be Turned Over for Legal Examination.

SANTA MONICA, Nov. 30.—The committee of citizens, self appointed, that has been laboring many weeks in the preparation of amendments to the city's freeholder charter has completed its work. The charter has been turned over to attorneys, who will pass upon the constitutionality of the several amendments.

The principal work has consisted of supplanting the present charter with one providing a commission form of government for the city. The new document has been fashioned after the charters of Grand Junction, Colo., and Berkeley, although those of Galveston, Des Moines and a number of the other commission system cities were studied and what appeared to be the best features in their charters were adopted. The plan is to call a mass meeting of citizens for next week, when the charter will be submitted for consideration. This will be followed by the circulation of petitions for a special election to be held in December.

Should the charter be approved by the electors at that time it will go before the Legislature in January for ratification and will go into effect when the terms for which the present city officers expire one year hence.

Under the provisions of the new document, the present Mayor and City Council and elective and appointing officers will be succeeded by a commission of three, who will be the City Council. The commissioner of public affairs and finance will also be treasurer, tax collector, librarian and he is to be ex-officio Mayor and is to receive a salary of $2400 per year. The commissioner of public works is to be paid $2000 and will be in charge of all streets, wharves, parks, piers and public works. The third commissioner is to be in charge of all heating, lighting, health, sanitary and food inspections and will also serve as police judge, for all of which he is to be paid $2000 per annum. Five members of the board of election are also elective. Power is given the Council to regulate the rates to be charged by telephone, gas, electric and water companies. The Council is permitted to spend money for amusements and advertising the city. Each commissioner is given power to appoint his own assistants, although all appointments must be confirmed by the Council. Regular employees are to include city clerk, atty orney, engineer and librarian, whose salaries are to be fixed by ordinance. The city is granted the right to assume ownership of public utilities.

One of the radical departures from present methods in nominations is provided. Nominations are to be made by petition, but if at the primary election any candidate should receive a majority of all votes cast he shall be declared elected. There being no election for all of the offices the two candidates receiving the highest number of votes are to be considered as having been placed in nomination and another election will be held four weeks later.

The incumbents of all elective offices may be made victims of the recall upon petition of 25 per cent. of the vote cast for Mayor, but no recall petition shall be filed until the officer has given a three months' sample of his method of administering the affairs of the office to which he has been elected. The one sought to be recalled is automatically made a candidate to succeed himself, unless he should refuse to stand for re-election.

The initiative may be placed in operation on all proposed legislation upon the presentation of a 25 per cent petition of the city's electors, and the referendum may be invoked upon a petition amounting to 20 per cent. of the vote cast for Mayor at the last preceding election.

The present City Council will be compelled to call the proposed special election if the petition for it should aggregate 15 per cent. of the vote cast last December.

Freshmen at Claremont Carry Canes Before Sophomores, First Time in Six Years.

CLAREMONT (Cal.) Nov. 30.—What promised to be a big scrap was narrowly averted yesterday when the freshman class lined up at the door of the main building and forced the rest of the student body to walk through their lines in coming out of the chapel service at noon.

The freshmen, who had won from the sophomores in the class foot-ball game celebrated by springing canes, in spite of a counter sentiment in the student body. They put up a formidable front, before the sophomores who refused to tackle them in a body. Now the sophomores are going after the canes individually and disposing of them as they can.

The freshmen are exultant over their success, as no freshman class has been permitted to carry canes for the past six years.

The three inter-collegiate debaters for the coming contest with Occidental were selected last night after one of the keenest contests in years. The three men chosen were Loyd Lorbeer, Shirley Shaw and Chas. Metz, all upper classmen with considerable debating experience.

The question chosen for the debate this year is "Resolved, That the labor unions are justified by the use of all legitimate means in insisting upon the closed shop."

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Eight racing associations seeking to defeat anti-betting bills at Albany, contributed $264,000 to the Jockey Club for legal expenses, according to M. Lynn Bruce, counsel for the Executive Graft Investigating Committee.

At the session of the commission today Mr. Bruce ran over the various contributions that have been admitted in testimony and used them as a basis for his statement. Milk dealers' funds and fire insurance method took up most of the committee's time.

Victor A. Shaumberg, secretary of the Coney Island Jockey Club, the only "racing" witness, testified as to the club's legal expenses in 1908—the year the anti-betting bill was passed—and gave a partial list of payments made, including, he swore, $3000 to F. K. Johnston on November 28, 1908. Johnston was at the time an Independence League member of the assembly from New York. Asked what was their business."

the nature of Johnston's services, the witness replied that he did not know.

As the witness was able to throw little light on the alleged payment, he was requested to ask F. K. Sturgis, treasurer of the Jockey Club for a statement and it is understood the latter will be called as a witness tomorrow.

J. H. Stoddard, an underwriter, was called when the committee took up fire insurance. He said members of the New York Fire Insurance Exchange must abide by the rulings of the exchange.

"They must agree to abide by the rates fixed by the exchange?" he was asked.

"Yes."

"They act as a unit on rates?"

The witness hesitated.

"Well," he said, "if any of them break the 'gentlemen's agreement' they enter into, no broker in the city would handle

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

MACAO (Island of Macao, China) Nov.—30.—The Portuguese troops of the local garrison and the crew of the Portuguese gunboat Patria revolted last night, and taking possession of the city, proceeded to enforce certain changes in the administration of the affairs of this dependency of Portugal. The rebels continued in control today, the Governor and military officers being powerless.

The uprising began with the sailors of the Patria, who marched to the public square and fired three volleys as a signal to the troops, who at once forced an entrance to the armory and arming themselves, joined the seamen.

Several hundred strong, the rebels proceeded to Santa Clara convent, from which they drove out the nuns, ordering them to leave the island. The nuns fled to Hong Kong. From the convent the rebels marched towards the government house, before which they mounted a cannon. An interview with the Governor was requested, and when the officers at the government house intervened, they were silenced at the point of a bayonet.

GRANTED UNDER THREAT.

The Governor was compelled to hear the demands, which were the expulsion of the religious orders, increased pay for the army and navy, the suppression of the newspaper Vida Nova, and the righting of alleged wrongs suffered by the soldiers and sailors.

Under threat, the government granted every demand.

No causualties are reported, but the military officers say they have lost all control of the troops. Security of life and property is not guaranteed. When the rebels arrived at the Governor's palace, the Governor's aide protested against their entrance, a bayonet was placed at his throat and he was threatened with instant death if he gave an alarm.

CONSULS ALARMED.

HONGKONG, Nov. 30.—There is intense anxiety here over the Macao revolt and foreign consuls are making urgent inquiries regarding the security of the citizens of their countries and their property in Macao. The Chinese Viceroy has been warned to have troops in readiness for action. The British authorities had not sent a gunboat to the scene today. British citizens of Macao are arriving here.

Later advices from Macao state that foreigners there are safe. The Chinese shops are closed. The nuns and children of foreigners are coming to Hongkong.

It is stated that the Governor, after being forced to comply with the demands of the rebels, resigned.

Macao was settled by Portuguese merchants in the latter part of the sixteenth century and long was a flourishing port. After the cession of Hongkong to the British, the trade of Macao declined rapidly. The city was subsequently ceded to Portugal by China. Gradually the Portuguese extended their rule over the whole island of Macao. China objected to this extensive territory and insisting that the only concession ever made to Portugal was limited to the city of Macao, has frequently clashed with the Lisbon government over their respective territorial rights. Continued diplomatic negotiations have failed definitely to adjust the matter.

The city is now divided into two wards, one inhabited by Chinese and the other mostly by Portuguese, each having its own administration. When the Portuguese monarchy was overthrown the Portuguese of Macao petitioned the provisional government of Lisbon to permit the religious orders to remain undisturbed on the island.

Suburban Residents Scared at Crime Carnival.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Three attacks on women recently by negroes have aroused residents in the neighborhood of Fifty-sixth street and Monroe avenue. Ten negroes, all suspects, were arrested after an attack last night on Miss Madeline Robard.

All the assaults, which include robbery and cruel beatings of the victims, are attributed to two persons, one of whom is described as a "colored man under medium build," while the other was a tall negro.

Because of the lack of police protection, members of the Chicago Woman's Club and professors connected with the University of Chicago, in addition to other prominent citizens, have interested themselves in various plans for better patrolling and lighting of the neighborhood.

Last night's victim, Miss Robard, a teacher of French, was on her way to give a lesson when she was seized by a negro who stifled her screams by placing his hand over her mouth. He dragged her to a vacant lot, beating her over the head with a revolver while he took three rings, a gold watch and a small sum of money from her.

Miss Robard is in a serious condition at a hospital.

Two Hundred and Five

Horses and Mules At Auction

Dec. 3, 1910

By order of B. T. McCullough, we will sell two hundred and five head of horses and mules as follows: eighty head of mares from 1000 to 1200 pounds in foal by fine jacks; eighteen head of weanling colts; thirty-two head of two and three-year-old unbroken mules; seventy-five head of broken mules from three to seven years old. These mules are especially fine, being big boned, gentle raised, out of good mares, and by the best jacks money would buy. We feel justified in saying that there is not another bunch of mules their equal offered for sale in the State.

Sale takes place at 10 a.m., on December 3rd, rain or shine, at the McCullough Ranch two miles east of CROWS LANDING. Intending purchasers should arrive the day previous to the sale. Automobiles will be provided; also free lunch. Terms cash.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

PASADENA.

SEPTIC TANK IS CITY'S NOW.

SEWAGE PURIFIER ACCEPTED FOR MUNICIPALITY.

Mayor and Members of Council Go Through Dark Tunnel in Which the Microbes Will Operate to Cleanse the Water for Irrigation—"Dry Tract" to Get Water.

(Office of The Times, 25 S. Raymond avenue.)

PASADENA, Dec. 1.—The big septic tank at the city sewer farm has been completed and accepted and early this morning the sewerage from the city will be dumped into the black tunneled tank to travel on its winding course, for over a third of a mile, and come out clean and non-smelling to quench the thirst of the trees and vegetation of the farm. Mayor Earley accompanied by the entire City Council, City Engineer Van Ornum and Mayor Wyndham of Long Beach, made the trip to see the work and accepted it from the contractor, Andrew Holoway.

The tank cost the city $16,200. It is located at the entrance to the farm, which is located about a mile south of Alhambra. The tank is built of concrete and is set into the ground with the top even with the surface. It is built in compartments so that the water enters at one end and flows back and forth through the various compartments until all of the solids have been consumed and the various kinds of germs have consumed each other when the spring-like water emerges at the other end of the big tank.

The tank is 115 feet wide and 230 feet long, at least that is the way it looks from the top of the ground, because it is flat and entirely covered with concrete. In other words the septic tank resembles a great winding tunnel three feet wide and 2000 feet long, which is as dark as a dungeon. This feature is the virtue of the tank because it is in total darkness that the anaerobic germs pounce upon each other and completely exterminate themselves.

In order to show the Mayor and Councilmen the entire works the contractor took them on a trip through the tunnel. It was a long, tiresome trip, with nothing to see but darkness and finally when they emerged a more pleased set of lawmakers was never seen. "For once the Mayor and Council were all in total darkness," remarked one of the guides.

"It is certainly a good proposition," said Mayor Earley, last night, after returning from the trip, "and I believe it will do everything it has been recommended to do. We will use all of the water for irrigation purposes both to irrigate our farm and the lands of others below the farm."

The tank holds 1,000,000 gallons and the entire flow of the city sewer, at the present time, is about 1,750,000 gallons per day, so that the sewerage will remain in the tank from twelve to fourteen hours, which is considered plenty of time for the extermination of the solids and germs.

"DRY TRACT" GETS WATER.

The announcement from the officials of the Pasadena Lake Vineyard, Land and Water Company that that company will lay all necessary pipes and build a 2,000,000-gallon reservoir near Devil's Gate to furnish every foot of land in the northwestern part of the city, including what has been known as the "dry tract," with an abundance of water is good news to the owners of ground in that section.

Provision has also been made to furnish the new Arroyo Park tract, which was recently purchased by a syndicate and will be made one of the choice residential sections of the city. The price at which the water will be furnished is considered reasonable. Every lot owner in the entire 275 acres will be furnished water at the same rate. The entire cost of laying the pipe and installing the reservoir will be about $16,000 which means that each square foot of the ground will have to pay .0016 cents, or in other words the rate for a lot of 50 by 200 feet will run $16. Most of the lots in that district run less and consequently the rate for the lots is from $10 to $16 each. Most of the owners of property will sign for the water and it is believed practically every lot will be signed up within the next few days, when work will begin. The officials of the water company say it will take about three months to install the whole works and then the people of that section will have the best water system in Pasadena and the meter rates charged will be those provided by the city. For many years the "dry tract," as it has been called, has been without water or rather without a sufficient supply and for that reason the price of lots has been small. It is believed the new water supply will double the price of property as soon as it is installed.

An effort is being made to get the members of the Citizens' League to drop their lawsuit against the North Pasadena Land and Water Company in which they attempted to compel that company to furnish them with water.

ARRANGE FOR NEW LINE.

Officials of the Pacific Electric Company and Southern Pacific Railroad visited Pasadena yesterday and looked over the proposed new electric line to Pasadena via the Southern Pacific rails from Oneonto Park to the Southern Pacific depot. They indicate that the work of electroizing the line and putting in a double track will begin about the first of next month.

Mayor Windham of Long Beach was in the city yesterday in consultation with Mayor Earley and the Park Commissioners regarding the Long Beach band giving the band concerts here during the winter and spring. He stated that his band is already booked for a number of Sunday concerts and will not be able to play in Pasadena Sundays. Inasmuch as that is one of the particular specifications it is likely that band will drop out of the contest. The only two other bands which want the job are the Pasadena band and Gregory's Italian band of Santa Monica.

Voting for the "Rose Queen" who will reign over the festivities in the big rose parade on Tournament Day was more spirited yesterday. Miss Grosse made heavy gains and went to 10,500; Miss Palmer 10,300 and Mrs. Gerlach 1200.

Extensive arrangements are being made for the fifth annual meeting of the Southern California Science and Mathematics Association which will be held at the Throop Institute Saturday. The opening session will begin at 9:45 o'clock in the morning. The election of officers will take place late in the afternoon.

Phillip Oates, who has started suit against the city to prevent enforcement of a recent ordinance providing that none except the city sewerage wagons can collect garbage, was yesterday denied a temporary injunction. Oates had a contract for gathering garbage from a number of restaurants and hotels and feeding it to his hogs and chickens. The city maintains a large hog ranch at the city farm and needs all the garbage of the city.

The bazaar of the Rebekah Lodge was opened yesterday afternoon in Elks' Hall, corner of Colorado street and Raymond avenue. The hall is beautifully decorated in ferns and smilax. There are a number of pretty booths, which are in charge of the women of the lodge.

Hotel Green will open its doors for the season this afternoon and the first dinner to be served will be this evening. Manager Plumer, accompanied by his family, arrived last night. Chief Clerk G. A. Viles arrived several days ago and superintended getting the big house ready for the opening. The formal opening, however, will not be held until about the middle of the month. The manager says that the bookings for the season are very good and the prospects are for a busy year.

DOG'S ENFORCED FAST.

Brindle Bull Locked in Bathroom Twenty-one Days Without Food or Water.

AVALON, Nov. 30.—Twenty-one days locked in a small bathroom without food or water, is the experience of a brindle bull dog owned by Capt. G. Farnsworth. Three weeks ago the dog disappeared and though an exhaustive search was made, it could not be found.

When released from captivity the dog weighed less than ten pounds, its original weight having been thirty-one pounds, and it was so weak that it could scarcely crawl. The mystery how the dog got into the bathroom cannot be solved.

GETS DEPUTYSHIP.

Whittier Municipal Counsel Appointed Deputy to Serve Under Dist.-Atty. Fredericks.

WHITTIER, Nov. 30.—The appointment of Ralph F. Graham, City Attorney here, as a deputy under Dist.-Atty. Fredericks, was announced today. Mr. Graham has been counsel for the city several years. He is also clerk of the High School trustees.

GREAT INTEREST.

THE DRAWINGS FOR PASADENA'S BRILLIANT TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PASADENA, Nov. 30.—Everything is in readiness for the first tournament of the Pasadena Tennis Club which will be in session today, tomorrow and Saturday, at the Hotel Maryland courts. The players have been invited to enter, but so far as the spectators are concerned everyone is welcomed.

The courts have been recently completed and were built especially for the new tennis club. They are said to be the best in Southern California. Great grandstands have been built on two sides, so that there will be seating capacity for fully 5000 people.

"From the information we have now," said Cloyd Guyer, secretary, last nihtg, "I believe we will have record breaking crowds. Tonight we had telephone information from Los Angeles stating that from 1000 to 2000 people will be over to see the games each day. Of course we expect our largest crowds on Saturday, when Pasadena will have the bigest tennis boom she has ever had."

Practically all of the prominent champions of the Pacific Coast will participate. Of course a tennis tournament would not be complete in Southern California without May Sutton. She came over last night and registered at the Maryland and will be a regular attendant at the games. On Saturday she will play with her sister, Florence Sutton, in an exhibition. Her sister, Mrs. Bruce, will also appear in the ladies singles.

But there are other favorites. Miss Elizabeth Sherk will participate in the women's singles and it is more than likely that she will show up in fine shape along near the finals, and may of her friends believe she will be runner-up to the winner. She has not been well known in the tennis matches until a couple of weeks ago she carried off the championship of the Valley Hunt Club easily.

Then there will be Tom Bundy and Maurice McLoughlin, who have played each other for championship honors on every court on the Pacific Coast. McLoughlin has usually beaten Bundy at home, but Bundy made his big reputation last summer when he was the runner-up at the national tennis tournament in the east.

Another interesting match and one which will bring out a big crowd will be that between Win Mace and the winner of the men's singles. It will be for the Tod Ford cup, which was won last spring by Mace and held by him since that time. The winner of the men's open singles will contest for the cup, which will indicate the championship of the Pasadena Tennis Club.

The drawings were announced late last night. Woman's singles are Miss Sherk, a bye; Miss McCament, a bye; Mrs. Stickrod will play Miss May Sutton; Miss Toedt will play Miss Earley; Miss Florence Sutton, a bye; Miss Rowan will play Mrs. Widdison; Mrs. Harvey, a bye; Mrs. Bruce, a bye.

Men's singles: L. F. Johnson will play A. V. Duncan; T. C. Bundy, a bye; Gerald Young, a bye; N. M. Brown will play Earl Shook; C. B. Hopper will play K. Newell; A. Bell, a bye; W. C. Johnson, a bye; W. Deitrich, a bye; C. Barker will play W. Horrell; W. Brown, a bye; McLoughlin, a bye; E. G. Galusha will play C. Hard; J. D. Holmes, a bye; E. V. Wilson, a bye; S. M. Sinsabaugh, a bye; R. Pitcairn will play Ray Brooks.

Men's doubles: Horrell and Horrell drew a bye; Holmes and Bell, a bye; Sinsabaugh and Hooper will play Barker and Barker; Bacon and Young, a bye; Brown and Duncan, a bye; W. C. Johnson and Horrell, a bye; Mace and Herd, a bye; Bundy and McLoughlin, a bye.

The tournament will open at 9 o'clock this morning with both men's and women's singles. The women will have one court and the men the other. In the afternoon the entire time will be taken up with the men's doubles. There will be no women's doubles nor misses' doubles.

LONG BEACH.

STEAL A HOUSE IN THE NIGHT.

COTTAGE TAKEN FROM PLACE OF THE OWNER.

Efforts of the Loser and of the Police to Locate the Missing Dwelling Prove Futile—Plans Arranged for the Laying of the Corner-stone of Polytechnic High.

LONG BEACH, Nov. 30.—What has become of his house, is a question which Samuel Baker and the police are trying to solve. Baker, who lives in Caliente, some time ago traded some oil stock to Alex McDavid for a house and lot on the corner of Eighteenth and Alamitos avenue. Baker came here and after looking at the property agreed to the trade and in time secured his deed.

Last week he wrote to some Japanese gardeners relative to leasing the place, and described the property to the Japs, who replied that they could find no such house and lot. This worried Baker, who arrived in town today and, visiting his property, found that the cottage had disappeared.

Wagon tracks showing wide tires indicated that it had been hauled away. Inquiry of neighbors brought out the information that a few nights ago there was heard the sound of hammering and tearing of boards, but no particular attention was paid to it, nor was the absence of the cottage noticed until attention was called to the matter.

Rebuilt and repainted, it is probably the domicile of some thrifty and unscrupulous person in another part of town.

CORNER FOR POLYTECHNIC.

At a meeting of the Board of Education last night all arrangements were completed for the corner stone ceremonies of the new Polytechnic School on December 16, the closing day of school for the Christmas holidays. Following is the programme: Music, Municipal band; invocation, Dr. Henry Irving Rasmus, pastor First M. E. Church; music, High School glee clubs, Miss Alice Rogers, directress; short address, Prof. J. D. Graham, superintendent of schools; address of the day, Rev. H. K. Booth, Congregational Church; laying corner stone by Masonic Grand Lodge of California, D. R. Weller of Los Angeles, grand master, officiating; prayer of benediction, Rev. O. H. L. Mason, Presbyterian Church; music, High School students; greetings, Myra Kingman Miller, president Parent Teachers' Association Federation, Earl McDermott, president High School student body.

YOUNG WIFE DISAPPEARS.

Mrs. Lola Butts, aged 19, disappeared from her home on Orange avenue Monday morning and all trace of her is lost. Her father placed the matter in the hands of the police today. The husband of the young woman is Clyde Butts, of the Craig ship plant. The couple lived with his parents. Monday Mrs. Butts started for a neighbor's, bareheaded and with only her everyday clothing, but never arrived. Previous to her marriage the young woman, whose name was Phillips, was an employee of the New Method Laundry in Los Angeles. So far as known, the married life of the young people was happy.

LAUGH ON NORTON.

The police were notified this morning that a man with a big bunch of chickens was being trailed by neighbors who thought he might be one of the gang which has been robbing hen roosts in the northwestern part of the city. The police investigated and found the supposed miscreant to be City Treasurer E. E. Norton, late candidate for Public Administrator, who easily convinced the officers that he was distributing the fowls to housewives of the Congregational Church, who were to cook them for a church supper.

The Long Beach High School house of representatives will hold a session of its legislative body at the auditorium tomorrow night, when the practicing "legislators" will present a debate on the commission plan of government to which the general public is invited. It is announced that the discussion will be absolutely nonpartisan and no decision will be rendered.

During the month of November 109 building permits, of the contract value of $94,767 were issued. During November of last year the building permits totalled $34,490.

ON GUARD FOR FROST.

Citrus Growers About Pomona Organize for Protection from Damaging Chills in Groves.

POMONA, Nov. 30.—Extensive preparations have been made here this year by citrus growers in different localities to guard against possible damage from frost. Growers living near together in exposed districts have joined in purchasing "orchard stoves" and fuel to be used if necessary. The Pomona Fruit Growers Exchange is divided into five districts, the first including all groves west of Hamilton avenue; the second, all north of First street between Hamilton and San Antonio avenues; the third, all north of First street between San Antonio avenue and the county line; the fourth, north of First street and as far as the district extends; the fifth, south of First street and east of Reservoir street.

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Locke of Los Angeles addressed a well-attended meeting of the Men's Brotherhoods of this city at Trinity Methodist church last evening, having come here at the invitation of the Trinity Brotherhood. Dr. Locke spoke entertainingly upon "The Possibilities and Privileges of Church Brotherhoods, Federated and Otherwise."

At Pomona Masonic Temple last night Pomona Lodge No. 246 conferred the third degree upon four candidates, a banquet following the ceremonies. There were a number of visitors present from Covina and Ontario.

At the home of his parents on North Park avenue last evening Charles McKim, captain of the Pomona High School football team, entertained the members of his team at dinner. The dining room was decorated attractively, the place cards being handpainted football souvenirs. Misses Eloisa and Stella McKim and Mary Nesbit served the dinner in courses. Those present were Coach Otto Fritsch, Messrs. Hume, Teague, Johnson, Pruitt, Nichols, Fleming, Graff, Clark, Earl Clark, Williams, Smith, Walker, Doolittle, Roe, Ogle, Davis, Parker, Kinney, Bartlett, Cummings and Southerest.

SCORE HALL VICTORY.

Protestants Favoring Bond Issue Plan Gain Their Point With South Pasadena Trustees.

SOUTH PASADENA, Nov. 30.—Vigorous protests on the part of scores of representative citizens prevented the proposed programme of continuing with the project of building a city hall to cost $15,000, without first submitting it to a vote of the people. The victory was won at the City Trustees meeting last evening. After hours of debate the protestants scored.

Trustees Carlin, Vatcher and Adams were designated as "the solid three" who insisted upon going ahead with the plans, while Wilson and Jacobs were the two who urged that the matter be halted until several questions of importance relative to the matter be decided.

The meeting was attended by representatives of various civic associations and taxpayers generally, and it was probably the most stormy one ever held in this city. Arguments advanced against the improvement were street work, which is more necessary at the present time, that the city hall should be built from a bond issue, that it should be a complete building creditable to South Pasadena and to cost $40,000 instead of $15,000, that time should be taken to discuss consolidation or annexation with Los Angeles under the borough system. It was further argued that the next session of the Legislature will probably change the laws so that this can be done more to the advantage of this city, than at present, tha tthe Owens River water question should be considered, that if taken into Los Angeles, South Pasadena probably would want another kind of a building than if the city remained separate.

As it now stands, President Adams agreed to submit the question of building a city hall as proposed, to an advisory vote by the postcard system and the project was continued sixty days.

SAN DIEGO.

LURCH OF SHIP DEATH TO WIPER.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON STEAMER OFF SALINA CRUZ.

Man Slips on the Steps Leading to the Engine-room and Falls So as to Strike a Heavy Piece of Machinery and Crush His Skull—Officer on Long Walk.

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 30.—When the steamer Virginian arrived in port today she carried her flag at half mast. This was because of the death of Manuel Triba, a wiper in the engine room. The body was delivered to a local undertaker who notified the Coroner. An inquest will be held. According to Capt. Green's story Triba slipped on one of the steps leading from the deck into the engine room, falling in such a manner that the back of his head struck a piece of heavy machinery, crushing the skull so that death was almost instantaneous. The accident occurred 200 miles south of San Diego while the vessel was en route from Salina Cruz. Capt. Green states he made a thorough investigation and is satisfied that Triba's death was due to an accident.

Lieut. Kirby Crittenden, of the submarine fleet in the harbor here, today began his task of walking fifty miles in three days. The order came from the Navy Department as a test of the physical powers of officers. Crittenden took up his pedal trial on North Island, which is more secluded than other parts of the l y region. Time keepers have been appointed, to see that he keeps up his grind until the fifty miles are completed.

CONFISCATES FIREARMS.

Leaving Salina Cruz the 23rd inst. Capt. J. S. Green of the freight steamer Virginian which arriver here today, reports that on that date a feeling of intense bitterness against Americans was rapidly rising among the Mexicans of the Tehauntepec district.

On account of the revolutionary feeling the Federal officials now close all saloons at 10 o'clock each night. Heretofore such places were allowed to run all night. Capt. Green further stated that the city officials of Salina Cruz have confiscated all firearms owned or carried by individuals wherever it was possible to find them. They also have confiscated all ammunition found both in stores and in private houses. Merchants carrying firearms were paid for all they had in stock.

Capt. Green states that the government force of rurales in Salina Cruz has been doubled. Mexican sailors employed on the Virginian are of the opinion that trouble will yet break out on the isthmus. Last week, they say, several street brawls took place between American and Mexican sailors. These brawls occasioned the step taken by the government to confiscate firearms.

Walter S. Hill this morning petitioned the City Council to pay him $22,576.15 damages. Hill avers that on June 3, he was walking on Juniper street, toward Bank street, when in the darkness he plunged over an embankment, falling twenty-five feet or more into a canyon. The fall, he says, caused him to receive such injuries as will make him a cripple for life. Hill says his thigh bone was broken and that several ribs were fractured and that he was permanently injured. The Council referred the claim to the City Attorney.

The Council finally adopted an ordinance granting the San Diego Electric Railway Company a franchise to run twenty-five years, when the city has the right to acquire the company's that a separate election shall be held to vote a bond issue for the purpose of delivering funds with which to purchase the property.

SANTA BARBARA.

SNAPS HAWSERS IN STIFF GALE.

SCHOONER IN TROUBLE AT SANTA ROSA ISLAND.

With Two Hundred Arizona Cattle Aboard the Power Vessel Gives Up Attempt to Make Landing. Bovines from the Ranges for Fattening on the Insular Domain.

SANTA BARBARA, Nov. 30.—With 200 Arizona cattle abroad, the powerboat, Santa Rosa Island, had a strenuous time yesterday attempting to land at Beecher's Bay on the island. After several hours it was finally decided to give up, and the boat returned to Santa Barbara.

A stiff northwester was blowing and there was a tremendous ground swell. The vessel reached the bay without much trouble, but its difficulties were insurmountable when it attempted to tie up to the island wharf. Two hawsers were parted and the boat was nearly capsized several times. Fearing that the valuable cargo might be dumped overboard, the boat returned to the mainland. Every year several hundred cattle are taken from Arizona to the island where they are fattened for the market.

STEP PROVES FATAL.

When Manuel Cota, aged 80, stepped from a Southern Pacific train at the depot ten days ago, before it had come to a standstill, he received injuries that resulted in his death yesterday. The elderly gentleman heard the brakeman call the station and, unaccustomed to traveling, supposed it was time to get off. The train was just pulling into the station when he stepped into the street and fell headlong quite a distance. He was picked up unconscious and taken to a hopital. The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon.

One of Santa Barbara's oldest residents died yesterday, in the person of Miss Laura Borden, who had just passed her 80th milestone. She was a native of Vermont and came to this city thirty years ago. She leaves a cousin, Earl Wolcott of San Francisco.

Word has been received that President Ripley of the Santa Fe, will arrive in Santa Barbara on or about December 15. He will occupy his winter residence and remain here until next spring. Mr. Ripley spends every winter in California. Local golf and polo players look forward to his coming with delight.

SAN BERNARDINO.

TOWN ACTIVE AS A HOST.

CLUBS OF WOMEN HOLD THEIR CONVENTION.

Mayor Pays High Compliment to What Has Been Done by Their Organization Locally — Chamber of Commerce Favors Revival of County and District Fairs.

SAN BERNARDINO, Nov. 30.—The ninth annual convention of the Southern District Federation of Women's Clubs assembled this afternoon at the Woman's Club House. Mayor McNabb welcomed the delegates, who represent almost every town and community in Southern California. The convention will continue tomorrow and Friday. This is without doubt the most important gathering of club women ever assembled here, and the members of the local club, assisted by the citizens generally, have put forth special efforts to make the arrangements signally successful.

The club rooms are glorious with regal chrysanthemums, pepper branches palms and blushing roses, while smilax used extensively, lend a touch of delicate green. The decorations are especially lovely, and are the handiwork of Mrs. C. H. W. Leeson, Miss Maude Cooley, Mrs. Winfield Scott and Miss Ida Devening, of the Decoration Committee.

Mrs. William E. Rittler, president of the southern district, presided at this afternoon's session, which was opened with an invocation by Rev. Alvah Grant Fessenden, of the First Presbyterian Church. In the opening address of welcome Mayor McNabb paid a high compliment to the successful achievements of women in San Bernardino, pointing to Meadowbrook Park as one instance where the club women, under the late Mrs. Mary Goodcell, reared a monument which will last through the generations.

GAIN IN BUILDING.

The eleven months of the year ending with today bring the total building record for the year to $433,582. The month of November adds $19,125 to the year's record. While in the grand total the record is slightly behind the same period of the previous year this is only due to the Santa Fe having secured a quarter million building permit last year, while the bulk of the permits taken out since the commencement of the present year represent homes, which have been steadily building in all parts of town.

FAVORS DISTRICT FAIRS.

The local Chamber of Commerce will send a delegation to the State Fair at Stockton, December 7, at which will be discussed a proposition to revive the old district and county fairs which were in vogue in the State years ago. The local chamber is in favor of the plan.

L. H. Wells is sought by the officers on a charge of flooding the business district with worthless checks. He worked one night as a Santa Fe brakeman, ingratiating himself into the friendship of the employees, and next day with the knowledge of names and faces of well known railroad men he set forth, finding it an easy matter to pass his paper. The officers believe he is a professional of national reputation.

Special Indian Agent Ben DeCrevecoeur left here this morning for Needles, from which place he will start down the Colorado River with a posse after Mike Creeo, the fugitive Indian, who is charged with having shot to death Dr. Charles Gilbert of this city in El Dorado Canyon Saturday, and a month ago killed ex-Sheriff W. H. Woodworth in the McCullough Mountains. DeCrevecoeur has information that the Piute has taken to the McCullough Mountains, and the officer expects to give him battle there.

STRANGLES IN BUGGY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL CENTRO, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. B. F. McDonald, wife of a rancher located in water district No. 6, southwest of El Centro, met a horrible death yesterday afternoon while driving home from a call at the house of a neighbor.

She was alone in the buggy when seized with an attack of dizziness to which she was subject. Falling sidewise her head was thrust through the standards supporting the buggy top and her neck was forced down into the space between two supports until she strangled.

Sheep herders noticed her position as the horse continued on its way and ran to relieve her but she soon died.

OLD FIRM CHANGES HANDS.

COLTON, Nov. 30.—The oldest firm in this city, the E. A. Brooks Lumber Company, changed hands today, the purchasers being the Fox Woodsum Lumber Company of Redlands, formerly of Nebraska. W. C. Johnson will be retained as manager.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks, who have large property interests in Colton, Loma Linda, Bloomington, Chino, Los Angeles and other places, expect to make their future home in Los Angeles.

Constable Button, Night Watchman Mullen and Southern Pacific Officer Edwards made a big haul last night when they raided the old icing station located on the Santa Fe tracks north of this city. Twenty men were landed in the city jail.

New York residents of German descent are about to undertake the erection of a large building in a central location in that city, which shall be representative of the influence the Germans have exercised on American art, literature, music and industry. It is to contain a large concert hall and restaurant.

Trunk's Prescription FOR RHEUMATISM AND GOUT

Will positively overcome any kind or any case of Rheumatism or Gout on earth. This is a broad assertion, but it is true. You simply can't keep Rheumatism or Gout if you will take this prescription according to the directions. It has never been known to fail in any form of Rheumatism. It does not ruin the stomach; it does not depress the heart; it does not contain any narcotics of any kind. It is the greatest uric acid solvent known and also a superior medicine.

It is a pity and a shame to allow anyone to suffer with Rheumatism or Gout when you can get Trunk's Prescription for Rheumatism and Gout for $1.50, or six bottles for $7.50.

There is nothing just as good and it is impossible to get something better.

Try The California Christmas Box Way This Year

IT WILL SAVE YOU LOTS OF TIME, WORRY AND EXPENSE and your Eastern friends and relatives will get more real enjoyment out of it than anything you have ever sent them. It is a common-sense, practical present—one that will please every member of the family, and you will find that they will greatly appreciate it. Where you have a number of presents to buy, $6.50 would not go far. CALIFORNIA PRODUCTS CAN BE BOUGHT BACK EAST, but they will taste so much better coming direct from California as a gift from a son, daughter, relative or friend. Father and mother or a sister or brother will take great pride and delight in telling about the California Christmas Box they received direct from loved ones and the good things it contained.

Peniel Hall Meetings.

An all-day missionary meeting will be held at Peniel Hall, No. 227 South Main street, today. A Japanese will be the speaker at the morning meeting, at 11 o'clock, and Rev. Barclay Buxton at night. There will also be a meeting at 2:30 p. m.

Work for Shop Girls.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" will be given in Cumnock Hall by the intermediate class of the Cumnock School, tomorrow night, for the benefit of the extension department of the Young Women's Christian Association. The cast promises an enjoyable evening, and the purpose for which the fund is designed should result in drawing a large audience. It is for the purpose of carrying the work of the association into stores, factories, and other places where many girls are congregated, and hundreds of them have been benefited in this way.

Hollenbeck Park Concerts.

It was only two weeks ago that the Ninth Ward Improvement Association of Boyle Heights took up the matter of securing the services of the Moore Band of 28 pieces, which will appear in Hollenbeck Park next Sunday afternoon from 2 to 4:30. Those who were most active in the work of securing the band are Messrs. W. J. Bryant, G. D. Flanders and A. S. Prentice, of the Improvement Association, Councilman R. M. Lusk, J. D. Dauze and Son, John J. Aiken and Judge Dunn. Prior to this time this band has been giving Sunday concerts in Eastlake Park. As a result of this added attraction at Hollenbeck Park, the usual large crowd will undoubtedly be more than doubled next Sunday. This park is one of Los Angeles' deservedly popular resting places, the lake and boating being especially attractive.

GUSHER OPENS BY LAKE VIEW.

BIG FLOW FROM THE NEW WELL LAST EVENING.

Union Oil Company Strikes Producing Sand at Depth of a Little More Than Two Thousand Feet. Petroleum Shooting Up Through the Derrick.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] At 8:30 o'clock tonight the Union Oil Company's Sage well No. 9 went into what is believed to be the Lake View sand at 2160 feet, a tremendous flow of oil resulted.

In the darkness it was impossible to accurately estimate the amount of the production, but oil spray is drenching the neighboring leases and the flow is described as bigger than anything that has been struck in the Sunset field recently.

A gate valve was placed on the casing before the gusher sand was tapped but it has not been closed and the oil is shooting up through the derrick.

SANTA ANA, Nov. 30.—Tomorrow articles of incorporation will be filed by the company organized by local men to build a new sugar factory at Delhi, three miles south of Santa Ana. It will be capitalized for $1,000,000. Among the incorporators are: James Irvine, James McFadden, M. M. and A. J. Crookshank, R. T. Harris, A. Getty and Frank Monaghan. No stock will be sold outside of Santa Ana.

All of the men named are stockholders in the Southern California Sugar Company, with whose management they are dissatisfied. With thousands of acres of sugar beet lands controlled by men in the new corporation, the new plant will not be lacking in sugar beets. The factory will be ready for operation within twenty months. Contracts for boring wells on the factory site will be let soon.

POSSIBLE VIOLATION OF LAW.

Some of the employees of the Home Telephone and Telegraph Company were called before the United States grand jury yesterday, supposedly in connection with a possible technical violation of the postal laws. There are certain delinquent accounts that the telephone company has at different times placed in the hands of a collection agency, and that agency, with which the telephone company has nothing to do, printed on its envelope a return card, in which it is announced that it is an agency for the collection of delinquent accounts. This is a violation of the postal laws, but the fact that a Home Telephone bill was enclosed in one of these envelopes is supposed to have caused the summoning of some of the company's employees before the grand jury.

HARDSHIP.

CLOSE SALOON, WIDOW LOSES.

Police Commission Policy Causes Tragic Story.

Now His Estate Is Out Value of Investment.

At midnight last night the Faust saloon, No. 116 North Spring street, was closed by the Chief of Police, acting under orders issued by the Police Commission at a special meeting yesterday afternoon. With this act ended the final chapter in a tragedy that began eight months ago, through which a widow's property, her husband's estate, is practically confiscated through an arbitrary and drastic policy of the Police Commission.

The saloon had been owned by Carl Leopold until he committed suicide, November 15, by hanging himself to a bed post. It was an old business and had been purchased by Leopold about eight months ago, when he came here from Ida Grove, Iowa, with his wife and family to pass the remainder of his days. He put all he had, $16,000, into the business, which he bought from John Davin.

The saloon is richly furnished, and was known as one of the better class. At the time of the purchase the deal was ratified by the Police Commission without question. It was a legitimate sale of a legitimate business to a man who was fit to hold a liquor permit.

But in the course of a few months the business became a care on Leopold and his health began to fail. In order to quit business he sought a purchaser, and found one in the person of Gus Hall of this city. The deal was made and depended on consummation only for the ratification of the Police Commission. It was the same kind of a deal by which Leopold had acquired the business, and ratification was not doubted by either seller or buyer. There was no objection to Hall.

But when the transfer came before the Police Commission it was disapproved. No reason was given then, but the next day members of the Commission told of a belief that the sale was a "wash sale," and that a brewery really owned the place. Members of the commission expressed a willingness to reconsider the action.

When Hall learned of the action of the commission he declined to continue his negotiations for the place and Leopold, broken in health, was put to the necessity of finding a new purchaser. He did not succeed. The refusal of the commission to ratify a transfer is understood to have deterred those who might have bought. The business seemed too uncertain.

Finding that his $16,000 establishment was depreciating every day because of the action of the commission, Leopold worried and became melancholy, and finally showed evidence of mental failure. On the morning of November 15 his body was found dead hanging by a rope tied to a bedpost at his home, No. 707 Temple street.

Under a ruling of the City Attorney a liquor permit is exclusively a personal privilege and terminates when the holder dies. This left the saloon without legal existence, but the commission permitted the business to continue until today because the license fee of $100 had been paid for November. Yesterday the Chief was directed to close the place.

Today it is estimated by those who know the value that the saloon is not worth $500. It is in a block on Spring street that the Chief has reported closed to all further saloon permits by remonstrance under the "block-prohibition" section of the new liquor ordinance. Friends of the Leopolds say the arbitrary action of the commission in the Leopold transfer has worked practical confiscation of his estate and leaves his widow with a valueless saloon as her only asset.

DIFFERENT.

OPEN-AIR AUDITORIUM TO HOLD A THOUSAND.

PLANS for the new Polytechnic High School group of Monrovia, as prepared by Architects Allison & Allison of this city, call for one of the handsomest, up-to-date educational institutions in the Southwest. The designs are now in the hands of contractors for estimates and the actual work of construction is soon to begin. It is the hope of the district that the school will be ready for occupancy by the beginning of the fall term next year.

The citizens of the thriving young foothill city recently voted bonds for $125,000 for the new buildings, and this, taken with the price paid for the site, will represent an outlay of over $150,000. The project is of personal interest to a great many persons whose business is situated in Los Angeles, and who commute back and forth to Monrovia daily, for the improvement is practically necessitated by the overcrowded condition of the latter community's present school quarters.

The new buildings will be constructed of brick, plastered with white cement on the exterior, the roofs being red Spanish tile. The main or academic building will front 200 feet on Ivy avenue, at Palm street, and will be eighty-seven feet deep. It will contain a suite of offices for the principal, as well as for the teachers, and ten spacious class rooms. Laboratories for chemistry, physics and biology, together with a large art studio will occupy the second floor, which will also contain a study hall.

Immediately back of this building and connected with it by a cloister will be a unique open-air auditorium with a seating capacity of 1000. This will have cement bowled floors and be surrounded by a series of columns.

In connection with this altogether novel feature there will be dressing rooms and other conveniences.

Fronting on Palm avenue, directly east of the main building and connected with it by a pergola, will stand the Manual Arst building, "T" shaped, with a frontage of 100 feet by a depth of thirty-two feet, and connected with a rear central wing 32x52 feet in size. This department will be equipped in the most modern fashion, provision being made for instruction in wood carving, joinery, pattern making, lathe work, mechanical drawing, metal working and forge work. Lockers and store rooms will be unusually complete.

On the north of the main building and connected therewith by another covered cloister, stands the present High School building, which is to be used, upon the completion of the new structures, for instruction in domestic science and kindred branches.

At Ivy and White Oak avenues the city will also rear an attractive eight-room grammar school from plans prepared by the same architects. The assembly room of this building will have a seating capacity of 500 and provision will be made for manual training and domestic science departments.

All the buildings planned will be heated with warm air furnaces, with a mechanical fan system of ventilation, and will be equipped with sanitary drinking fountains and vacuum cleaning systems.

The board of trustees of the Monrovia district is composed of Mrs. W. F. Marshall, president; Fred S. Whitcomb, secretary and Dr. John S. Allison. The special advisory committee consists of Monteville Flowers, Dr. Francis M. Pottinger, John H. Bartle, Mrs. Charles H. Anson and M. R. Williams. Prof. E. E. Rhepper is the principal.

Queer Game Tried on Unsuspecting Agents.

Job Hunters Are Required to Put Up Deposit.

Police Interfere and Concern Closes Doors.

George Miller, purporting to be the distributing agent in Los Angeles and Southern California for the Globe Association of Chicago, who for the past three weeks has been conducting operations in room No. 111, Henne building, has quit. He was ordered by the police to close up his business yesterday afternoon. According to the detectives, Miller has been conducting a swindling game, choosing men out of employment for his especial victims.

For several days the police and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association have been receiving reports concerning the alleged shady methods of business practiced by Miller and his lone assistant. It is alleged that they would insert an advertisement in a local paper offering good wages and easy work for agents showing a desire to sell their goods. Scores of unemployed men usually answered. Miller would explain that a deposit of $20 was necessary as evidence of good faith. The majority refused to pay. There were many, however, who were won over to the proposition by Miller's smooth explanations, and as a result they soon to be out the amount of their deposits.

LOOKS QUEER.

The proposition as advanced by Miller was in the nature of a swindle according to Detective McNamara who investigated the matter. Miller, according to the detective, was unable to produce any proofs of a documentary nature to show that he was the duly appointed agent of the Globe Association of Chicago. Miller explained that he had received one bill of goods from the concern since he opened his office in the Henne building, three weeks ago, but that he was unable to furnish the bill of lading or receipt for the money exchanged.

According to his account he was agent for the Globe Association when he resided in Kansas City several months ago. The plan as explained by Miller to McNamara is for agents of the company to secure other agents, until an endless chain of agents and patrons will link the Central office of the association with every city in the country.

Every new agent, according to his

SWIFT DESCENT OF OLE.

He Crashes Through Skylight and Tumbles Upon Desk Just Vacated by Hotelman Billicke.

A. C. Billicke, millionaire hotel man, had a narrow escape from possible serious injury yesterday when Ole Hermanson went tumbling through the skylight of the Hollenbeck, directly on the edge of the desk which Billicke had vacated less than five minutes previous in answer to a 'phone call from the Alexandria.

Ole is one of the Hollenbeck's latest importations from Sweden. He came to Los Angeles just a few weeks ago and obtained a job as assistant to the assistant janitor. Yesterday morning he was assigned to dust the cobwebs off the skylight over the foyer.

Never having traveled above glass before, the importance of his position dawned on Ole, and in the excitement, created, he stepped squarely into a a pane and resultantly went tearing through.

He was as lucky as the proverbial "lucky Swede" landing first on the high office railing, bumping from that to the desk of Billicke, and stopping his descent only with the floor after knocking over a chair and breaking a large water bottle.

The crash was instantaneous in bringing many groups of lobbyists and even diners from the cafe to the outside. Before they arrived Ole had been rushed into a back office and a doctor reached him two minutes after. The only injury to Ole was a few slight bruises and a bloody nose. Five minutes after the occurrence, the only testimony of the accident was the wide opening looking into the blue sky.

IN A HURRY FOR RECRUITS.

United States Army Needs Men, and Rush Order to Enlist Them Is Received Here.

A hurry order has been sent from the office of the Secretary of War to every recruiting station in the United States for the immediate enlistment of men for the United States army.

Yesterday the telegraphic order was received by Capt. Charles P. Elliott, U. S. A. (retired,) who is in charge of the Los Angeles recruiting station. The telegram come from Adjt.-Gen. Benjamin Alvord in Washington, and left no doubt as to its urgency.

Capt. Elliott, who came from Spokane about three weeks ago, says that the order is the result of the expiration of the term of enlistment of many soldiers taken into the army three years ago. At that time the full strength of the army—79,611—was reached and there was a cessation in recruiting.

The local station will move immediately into larger quarters in the Canadian Building, Main and Winston streets.

Capt. Elliott stated that there is an excellent opening for healthy young men in the army. The great extent of the territorial possessions of the United States offers travel and knowledge of the world, while the discipline they are enforced to undergo is excellent training for a life's work. Capt. Elliott's territory extends from Bakersfield to San Diego, and includes all the intervening towns and cities.

NO RENT.

FAT PICKINGS SQUATTERS GET.

UNCLE SAM WILL OUST THE RENT-FREE TENANTS.

Rich Harvests Are Gathered from Fertile Fields of the Pasqual Indian Reservation Without Sanction of the Government Officers. Indians Fail to Make Protest.

Uncle Sam is taking steps to oust squatters from the San Pasqual Indian reservation in San Diego county and make them account to the government for the profits which they have derived from cultivating land to which they had no title.

Several men endeavored to obtain patents from the government to the lands included in the reservation more than twenty years ago. I t had been set apart by the President and their applications were refused.

The fertility of the soil was an attraction and they determined to have the fruits from it at any hazard, say Federal officers. They apparently thought that they could farm the land until they were ejected and thus secure the crops.

The government paid little heed while they continued to reap harvest after harvest. The Indians were not in need of the land and they made no complaint. The Federal authorities changed and those who have been in office recently did not know that part of the reservation was held by squatters. As soon as this fact was ascertained, the Federal machinery was set in motion to rectify the situation.

The authorities will not be satisfied by the squatters giving up the possession of the property, but want all of the profits which have been made, as well.

Assistant United States Dist. Atty. Stewart yesterday filed suits in the United States Circuit Court against James M. Wood and W. H. Dinwiddie. The complaints ask that the defendants be put out of possession and that they pay $12,000 for rent and $2000 in damages. A half section is involved in the litigation.

NOW SEEKING MRS. GORDON.

Boston Banker, Investigating Disappearance of Miss Hodge and Her Large Legacy.

Waren T. Currier, a Boston banker, who has been passing a month in Southern California following up information concerning the disappearance of his sister-in-law, Miss Anna L. Hodge, formerly a teacher of this city, and her legacy of $30,000, yesterday placed the matter in the hands of the District Attorney.

Currier stated that no pains will be spared in investigating the disappearance of his sister-in-law. He said that his investigation leads him to believe that she met with foul play, and that she never received any benefit from her legacy.

The principal information now desired is the whereabouts of a Mrs. Gordon, with whom Miss Hodge lived, and who appears to have suddenly displayed considerable money.

Mr. Currier stated that he will spare no money in following up all clews. He said that during the last week valuable information has come to light which may assist in locating Mrs. Gordon.

BUNCOES THEM.

Employment Agent Collects Large Fees on Promise of Good Jobs and Fleeces Mexicans.

Shouting and cursing at the top of their voices, about fifty enraged Mexicans caused a reign of terror in the vicinity of No. 420 North San Pedro street yesterday. Men were finally driven from the street by the police before any damage was done.

The cause of the disturbance, some of the Mexicans declared, was the treatment given them by the proprietor of an employment agency at the above address. They claim he promised them jobs with very good pay in return for a comparatively large fee which was demanded. After collecting considerable money he left the city, and when the men went to the office yesterday they found it vacated.

SLIGHTLY LIMITED.

CITY VIRTUALLY OPEN TO THE FIGHT GAME.

THAT the city is practically open for limited prize fights with but a few minor points eliminated, is the opinion expressed by City Prosecutor Guy Eddie yesterday morning in a conference with Tom McCarey, who has secured a permit for boxing exhibitions under the ordinance passed a few days ago.

Following the passing of the ordinance and the granting of the permit, McCarey called upon the prosecutor, on the advice of his attorney, to learn the official view taken of the ordinance. According to a statement made by Eddie shortly after the conference, McCarey went away satisfied with the situation, and it is believed followers of the fistic sport will have their fill during the winter.

According to Eddie, McCarey will live up to the letter of the ordinance, and by close observance prevent any criticism of the Council for passing the ordinance and incidentally furnish all the fighting the Los Angeles fans desire.

The ordinance as drafted and carefully read by the prosecutor to the promoter yesterday morning specifies that the only award the fighters may receive is a medal not exceeding $25 in value, but there is no clause which forbids the selling of tickets for the fights.

"In other words," Eddie said, "with permits secured there is nothing to interfere with the conducting of 10-round fights with seven-ounce gloves in Los Angeles. The fights may be conducted in the old-style way, but the clause specifying seven-ounce gloves will probably make it impossible for the fighters to be knocked out, especially since it is required that the gloves be padded with 'some soft material.' The rounds may be three minutes long, with as short an interval as one minute between them.

"If the permits to hold fights are not abused—and I do not think they will be—I do not see why fight fans can't have all the sport they wish."

At the present time the police have not made any special provision for officers to be detailed to the halls where the fights will be held, and it was said yesterday that the plan followed when fights were allowed before would be in vogue for the fights to come. Heretofore the persons conducting the fight have paid from their own pocket the expense of having officers present and as it is permissible to charge an admission fee to fights in the future, the promoters will probably do the same as before.

Other than to specify that no person may engage in more than one "exhibition" in one day, no provision to regulate the frequency of fights is made.

WALL AGAINST SEA.

BREAKWATER GAP BIDS TO BE OPENED TODAY.

ANOTHER forward step in the great Los Angeles harbor enterprise is scheduled to be taken today with the formal opening of bids for the proposed extension to the government breakwater which flanks the outer harbor.

At 11 o'clock this morning Lieut. Leeds, United States Engineer for this district, and Capt. W. P. Stokey, who has acted for him during his recent absence, will sit down before a little pile of double sealed envelopes and proceed to the tabulation of their contents with a view to forwarding recommendations to the United States Board of Engineers as to who shall build the rest of the breakwater.

From all the signs it will not take long. Capt. Stokey did not feel justified yesterday in making known how many bids had been received to date, but he made it apparent that the time-honored method of holding bids until the last minute is more than religiously observed in this case. Uncle Sam is no skinflint but he knows how to drive a good bargain, as is intimated in one little clause in the contract specifications to the effect that there will be no allowances made for the failure of the contractor to accurately estimate the difficulties of his job—which may have acted as a deterrent to some.

Technically, the job which is about to be awarded is that of building the breakwater the rest of the way in to the shore from its present western end—a distance, at high water, of 1960 feet. The place which it will occupy is now taken up by a double-track, open-work trestle extending from the end of the finished breakwater to a point not far from the foot of Pacific avenue on the 146-acre tract to be improved by the city.

So much of the breakwater was left open at the time of its building because it was believed that, with its outer face closed in, the outer harbor would have a decided tendency to silt up with the refuse carried down by the Los Angeles, Santa Ana and San Gabriel rivers. By leaving open a space next to the shore it was thought that the harbor currents would suffice to prevent any such untoward filling up as to necessitate possible redredging.

It was the opinion of Capt. Price that this precaution was needless, and the recent observations of the harbor engineers have borne out his belief. It is further assured that, while the open space will not greatly expose the harbor to storms, the roughness of the surface in bad weather will be considerably increased by that opening for waves.

An act of Congress dated June 25, 1910, provided for the appropriation of $178,600 for filling in the gap. There is enough left from former appropriations to bring this up to about $230,000, less the necessary office expenses. Whether or not this will be enough will be determined by the bids received. Unquestionably contractors will want more proportionately for the small job than they did for the large one, so that the figures which applied to the main breakwater are no criterion—especially as it is rumored that money was lost on it before.

There will be no superstructure on this part of the breakwater. It will be made of stone laid in a rubble mound of a triangular cross-section, like a dam. It is to reach fourteen feet above low water with a width at the top of fifteen feet, though if the sum available is not enough, the western three-fourths may be lowered somewhat.

The stone to be used is required to be of sharp-angled rock weighing not less than 120 pounds per cubic foot when dry. About 40 per cent. of it may be in pieces weighing from two tons down to 100 pounds, but at least a quarter will have to be of rocks weighing six tons or more each. The latter are to be used for the seaward face of the breakwater, those over two tons being for the harbor face and the smaller pieces for the base and the hearting.

Following the opening and tabulation of the bids they will be sent to Gen. W. H. Bixby, Chief United States Engineer, with the recommendation of Lieut. Leeds as to the one which he thinks should be

THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

San Francisco representative of aqueduct bond syndicate is on his way East to confer on refinancing programme offered by the "solid five."

A get-rich-quick man was sentenced to ninety days in jail, yesterday, on a vagrancy charge by Police Judge Chambers.

Judge Hervey, yesterday, found in favor of the estate of Emily Tedford, involving the property of A. C. Tedford, located in the Eagle Rock district. The court took occasion to state what he thought of one of the witnesses.

There was an interesting argument in Judge Moss's court, yesterday, on the question whether the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway Company has a right to operate its lines along Main street from Second to Jefferson street.

The dispute between J. L. Murphey and Mary Woodman Kilborn, in regard to attorney's fees in caring for the estate of the latter's father and mother, reached the courts in a complaint for $2000 attorney fees, yesterday.

AT THE CITY HALL.

MUST WAIT FOR BOND ANSWER.

SYNDICATE TAKING ITS TIME TO CONSIDER NEW OFFER.

San Francisco Representative of New York Financiers on Way East to Discuss Supplying Aqueduct With Needed Money to Push Work to Early Completion.

No news from the New York bond syndicate on the refinancing of the aqueduct is not regarded as good news by the city officials having in charge the project for the early completion of the big ditch. No information has been received by Chairman Washburn in response to the offer of the Council to sell $2,258,000 of 1912 bonds with the premium of 1 per cent relinquished as a sort of bonus for immediate acceptance. The offer has been acknowledged by A. W. Bullard, San Francisco representative of the syndicate. He forwarded it by wire last week.

But it was learned yesterday that no answer may be expected from the New York financiers until after Bullard has held a conference with them over the situation. Bullard left San Francisco last Monday for Salt Lake City and is understood to have left the Utah capital for New York yesterday. It is not likely he will be able to confer with the syndicate officials until Monday and for this reason an answer is not anticipated until the middle or last of next week.

Out of the fact that Bullard has been summoned East is drawn a hope that the syndicate may accept the city's proposition which followed the rejection of the one made by the syndicate. On the answer hangs a great deal. If negative it means the aqueduct must wait until February 1 to ascertain whether the syndicate will exercise its option on the 1911 bonds aggregating $2,258,000. Should the syndicate not exercise its option the city will be required to advertise a new sale of the remaining bonds. Local financiers do not doubt the ability of the city to sell the bonds but there may be some disadvantage in the possible arrangements, then, for the supply of the money.

The gravity of the step taken by the "solid five" is beginning to be apparent to the Good Government officials who overrode the Finance Committee and its advisers last week after an advantageous deal had been arranged. If harm results from the blundering of the "solid five" there will be no division of responsibility.

AFTER LISSNER?

DE SOTO HEIGHTS AROUSED.

Residents of De Soto Heights who are furious over the location of the garbage loading station near their homes are after other officials than the nine Good Government Councilmen. Lissner and his Board of Public Utilities are objects of wrath because they have not provided what the De Sotans feel they are entitled to in the way of street car service. They would recall the impeachable nine but they cannot reach Boss Lissner with that weapon.

But they have found a way. It is direct and is the same method Lissner used to get himself into a position to deal with all the public utility corporations. An initiative ordinance abolishing the Board of Utilities has been advised as the remedy for the outraged residents of De Soto Heights. Such an ordinance created the Lissner board and financed its work.

Whether the protestants against the garbage station will go that far with their opposition to the street car service seemed a little doubtful yesterday as they insisted that the main thing with them is to end the parades of garbage wagons that pass through their streets.

GAS COMBINE.

YOUNG ALLEGES ONE.

Architect R. B. Young, who lives at Tenth and Hoover streets and purns gas supplied by the Domestic Gas Company, has asked the Council to inquire into what he alleges is collusion between this company and the Los Angeles Gas and Electric corporation.

He says his bills for September, October and November are exorbitant, and that he has declined to pay them. For the three months they aggregated $47. When the company refused to take less he says he made application to the Los Angeles company, which has a service in his home. He was told that this company could not serve him as the Domestic company "had a right to this territory."

SEWER RELIEF.

FOUR WAYS, ONE GOOD.

There are four ways to prevent foul odors from the Compton avenue sewer, according to a report of the City Engineer to the Board of Public Works yesterday. The sewer was investigated because F. H. Davis and others complained of the gases escaping from the house vents. The Engineer says these odors are not caused by septic action but come from foul matters discharged into the sewer by a slaughter house.

The four methods to abate the nuisance are: Trap all house connections; increase house vents in height; introduce clear water into a series of settling tanks; treat sewage before its admission to the sewer.

The first plan, the engineer advises, is prohibitive as to cost, the second is impracticable as it would require changing the plumbing ordinance; the third is impracticable because of the scarcity and cost of water; the fourth is practical through an ordinance which will require treatment of the matter before putting it into the sewer.

"I am pleased to recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as the best thing I know of and safest remedy for coughs, colds and bronchial trouble," writes Mrs. L. B. Arnold, of Denver, Colo. "We have used it repeatedly and it has never failed to give relief." For sale by all dealers.—[Adv.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

DIVORCED WIFE LOSES SUIT.

COURT DISCREDITS TALE OF WOMAN WITNESS.

Tedford Will Case Which Has Been in Litigation for More Than a Year, Is Involved in a Suit to Quiet Title Heard Before Judge Hervey.

It is not often that a court feels called upon to publicly discredit the testimony of a witness in a case, but Judge Hervey and Miss L. R. Oliver furnished an exception to the general rule in Department Seven yesterday. The court said that he did not believe the evidence that had been given by Miss Oliver in the Tedford will case, except as it was substantiated by reputable witnesses.

The case involved the Tedford will that has been in the Probate Court in many guises within the past year. The point in the hearing was whether the dying man deeded his property to his wife, or willed it to his divorced wife, and the court found in favor of the first-named proposition.

Dr. Sarah Tedford and A. C. Tedford were divorced eighteen years prior to the last named's death seven years ago. After the separation A. C. Tedford married Emily Tedford. He and his last wife had an agreement by the provisions of which they should deed each other all the property and the survivor of the two was to have it. Four days prior to Tedford's death, he conveyed the deeds to his second wife, according to the allegations of the complaint, and which the court found to be true.

A year ago Mrs. Sarah Tedford presented a will to the Probate Court and it was admitted to probate by Judge Rives. Soon afterward a contest was started, the charge being that the will was a forgery. The claim of Dr. Tedford was that Mrs. Emily Tedford had not been given the deeds by her husband, but she claimed to have found them a few days after his death.

The principal witness for the divorced wife was Miss L. R. Oliver. The woman declared that she met Tedford two days before his death, going with a third person to see him in regard to some land deal. Tedford was making his will, she said, and he asked her to sign the codicil. He then asked her to go to Dr. Pasig, the family physician, and get the deeds which the woman said the doctor had.

The fact that the old man should take a stranger into his confidence in the manner indicated by the witness; her strange meeting with Dr. Tedford several years later when she, supposedly, informed the doctor for the first time that she had been willed the property of her divorced husband, and the discovery of the will glued between the pages of an Oxford Bible, left much doubt in the court's mind as to the credibility of Miss Oliver's evidence.

Judge Hervey found that the will had never been made and gave the entire property to the estate of the second wife, Emily Tedford. In the case of Sarah J. Tedford against Lester F. Gay and a number of others who had purchased portions of the Tedford estate since the death of Mrs. Tedford, the court found for the defendants, quieting their titles as to their various purchases.

MAIN STREET FRANCHISE.

INVOLVED IN DAMAGE ACTION.

The question whether the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway line is legally occupying Main street, from Second to Jefferson streets, by virtue of a lease from the Main street and Agricultural Park line, and later by a lease from the Los Angeles Railway Corporation, was thrashed out in Judge Moss's court, yesterday. At the conclusion of the arguments the matter was taken under submission, it being understood that counsel for the Los Angeles and Redondo line be allowed to submit authorities supporting their contention in the matter.

The point arose in the trial of the action brought by Kallie Boyle to recover $50,000, on account of the death of her husband, Edward E. Boyle, from the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway. One of the points relied upon in behalf of the complaint was the allegation that the defendant company was occupying Main street as far south as Jefferson street by sufferance only and therefore was an interloper.

It was contended on the part of the plaintiff that the Main Street and Agricultural Park line had a franchise to lay rails along Main street, but that this corporation had no right to make a traffic arrangement with the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway; that when the original company failed to operate cars on that part of Main street that the right or franchise lapsed.

Attorneys for the corporation urged that the question whether or not the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway Company occupied the track from Second to Jefferson treets, was a matter for the State or municipality to care for; that such an action could not be incorporated into a suit for damages for personal injuries; in other words, that it was "none of the business of the plaintiff" whether or not the street was properly and legally occupied by the defendant corporation. The franchise had been granted by the City Council, and in turn it had been transferred to the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway line.

Counsel stipulated that the City Council had no right to grant the right to lay rails on the thoroughfare to a subsidiary company, but that right having already been granted to the first corporation, there was nothing to prevent the defendant company from running its cars along those rails.

The court declared that the alleged irregularity in the proceedings leading up to the transfer of the right to run cars on the Main street line to the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway line had nothing to do with the case at bar, but it was also stated that a public service corporation was not warranted in occupying a street without warrant of law.

Judge Moss took occasion to remark that the authorities in behalf of the plaintiff's complaint appeared to be well to the point, but that the authorities seeking to enforce the contention of the defendant company were not as applicable as they might be.

SUIT FOR FEES.

NOW IN THE SUPERIOR COURT.

The difference of opinion arising between Attorney Murphy, and his former client, Mary Woodman Kilborn, in relation to the fees earned in the long-drawn-out litigation affecting the contest of the will of Julia Ann Kilborn, blossomed out in an action in the Superior Court, yesterday.

An action was brought by George F. Zimmer, an assignee of Murphy, to recover from Miss Kilborn $2000 alleged to be due for legal services during the past two years. There are three causes of action, two for $450 each, and a third for $2000. The last is for services in behalf of the will contest.

The Kilborn case, in its various phases, has been before one or another department of the Superior Court, at intervals, during the past two years, and is now before Judge Rives on a question of the property left by Julia Ann Kilborn, mother of the defendant.

A break occurred between Miss Kilborn and Attorneys Murphy and Poplin, when the matter was in Judge Moss's court on an action involving the bill of exceptions filed by Will D. Gould, to the finding of the court in the final account of Gould as executor of the estate of Mrs. Kilborn.

At that time Miss Kilborn said that she had retained a San Francisco attorney, former Judge Maguire, to look after her interests. She admitted that Murphy had withdrawn from the case on account of a difference of view as to the attorney fees. She stated she was willing to give Murphy a fair allowance for his work, but that she would not pay an additional sum to any of his partners. Failing settlement between Murphy and Miss Kilborn, the claim was assigned to Zimmer for collection.

THE PURCELL ESTATE.

TAX PAYMENT CONFIRMED.

In Judge Rives's court, yesterday, an order was made confirming the payment by Charles Purcell, one of the executors of the will of Mary Purcell of $25,714.65, on account of the inheritance tax in the State of Illinois.

The petition was filed by Edward C Magauran, another one of the executors, and it was set out that there were notes and obligations due the estate executed by citizens of Illinois amounting to $346,480.43. Under the laws of that State the inheritance tax must be paid on the bequests made by the testator Under the will of Mrs. Purcell, the Children's Hospital of this city was benueathed $8000, and the Los Angeles Orphans' Home, $1000.

A PASTOR'S WILL.

RELIGIOUS BODIES REMEMBERED

Religious institutions are made beneficiaries to the extent of $24,500 by the terms of the will of Rev. James D. Monroe, which was filed for probate yesterday. Rev. Mr. Monroe died in this city November 26, leaving an estate valued at $42,300, most of which consists of real property.

The will provides that several lots in this city, valued at $7700 shall be sold and the proceeds invested by the Foreign Missionary Society of the Pentecostal Church of the Nazarene to form the "J. D. Monroe mission fund" for the purpose of supporting a missionary in the foreign field. Property, valued at $6800, is left to the Foreign Missionary Society of the Free Methodist Church for a similar purpose. The decedent's library is left to the Free Methodist Seminary at Hermon, this State, and $200 is given to the Educational Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which has offices in New York City. The remainder of the estate is left to relatives.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

CONDEMNATION ACTION. The City of Los Angeles is plaintiff in a suit begun yesterday against Myer B. Davidson, and about fifty others, asking that the defendants set out their interest in a strip of land sought to be condemned by the municipality for the widening of Forty-second street from Wesley to Walton avenues, to the uniform width of sixty feet.

ALL TO THE WIFE. The will of James H. Dewey, who died in this city November 26, was filed for probate yesterday. It disposes of an estate valued at $82,000, of which $25,000 is in realty, and the balance in notes and mortgages.

SENT TO JAIL. In Judge Willis's court yesterday, Edward Clain, convicted of making an assault with a deadly weapon upon W. B. Browning at Bethlehem Home, August 28, last, was sentenced to the County Jail for six months.

INCORPORATIONS. Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday by Craig Loan and Investment Company, capital stock, $25,000, incorporators, T. Craig Kidd, Truman Paxton and N. Z. Whittaker, subscribed, $150; Apartment Home Building Company, capital stock, $75,000, incorporators, T. Arthur Cannell, Mrs. M. A. Cannell, Robert Neill, W. J. Burke and W. D. Jonghin, subscribed, $50,000; the Fisherman's Club, incorporators, Jesse J. Martin, R. E. Glaze, Franklin G. Huling, Wayne Osborne, John A. Bremmer, C. Donald Youngkin and T. C. Horton.

INNOCENT BYSTANDER DAMAGED. While sitting in his auto with several friends on the shimmering sands at Santa Monica, E. E. Easton had his machine knocked to pieces by Ehrman Grigsby, who it is declared was doing a bit of "joy riding" on a warm night in July. Easton thinks the damage to his machine is worth $1000, and he brought suit to recover that amount in the Superior Court, yesterday.

ALLOWED PROBATION. Judge Willis last evening, allowed Joseph J. Fleming, convicted of mistreating Agnes Zimmerman, to go on probation for two years, one of the conditions of the order being that beginning January 1 next, Fleming must pay the woman a monthly allowance of $12.50, for the support of the child.

PROBATION OFFICER RESIGNS. The resignation of D. F. McLaughlin, who has been probation officer in Judge Wilbur's court for the past year, was accepted yesterday. It is stated that McLaughlin will go into other business. The pay is $160 a month, and there will be many applicants for the position.

ADMITTED TO PROBATE. The will of Thomas F. Croft, who is his day was known as the "Father of Pasadena," was admitted to probate yesterday by Judge Rives. The estate is worth about $20,000. Soon after the death of Croft May last, a contest was begun by Mary C. Benham, a sister. A. C. Barnes and Thomas F. Barnes, nephews of the testator, but the matter was dropped. Under the terms of the will all of the property is bequeathed to the widow, Erietta Croft, with E. H. May, Pasadena, as executor.

WOOLLACOTT WILL. In Judge Rives's court, yesterday, the will of Henry J. Woollacott was admitted to probate. The instrument disposes of an estate of $500,000—one-half of which is bequeathed to the widow, and the other half to the three surviving children.

WANTS A NEW NAME. A petition was filed in the Superior Court, yesterday by Richard Cann, praying he may be allowed to change his name to Richard Mulford, and that the family name of Mulford be conferred upon his wife and son. Cann states that his present name is euphonious with "can-can," "canned," "tin can," etc., which makes it very unpleasant for his family. His brother, George Cann, has been allowed to change his name to Mulford.

REASON ENOUGH. Mary E. Sherwood filed an action yesterday asking that her marriage with T. R. Coleman, June 28, 1909, be annulled, on the ground that at the time, and since, the husband has been physically unable.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

GET-RICH-QUICK MAN IN JAIL.

GIVEN A NINETY-DAY SENTENCE FOR VAGRANCY.

Police Judge Declares Failure of Scheme to Work Does Not Remove Liability to Punishment. Option of Fine Is Not Allowed. Cole's Sentence Suspended.

J. W. Everhart, dubbed "J. Wallingford," by Police Court officers was sent to jail for ninety days on a charge of vagrancy yesterday afternoon. Police Judge Chambers did not allow defendant the option of a fine.

Everhart was arrested last week on suspicion of an attempt to defraud but sufficient evidence could not be secured. To prevent his going free, the detectives changed the charge to vagrancy.

Though Everhart was not successful in his "Peru mines" venture, Police Judge Chambers declared that did not help much, as in all probability the quickness with which the police got trace of him alone prevented several hard-working miners from losing their money.

He was charged with inserting an advertisement in local newspapers offering positions in "Peru mines" at $1 per day, American money.

The investigation of the detectives developed that the miners after accepting jobs in the "Peru mines" were asked to deposit from $10 to $25 as "good faith."

After placing Everhart in the city jail on suspicion, the detectives found that the men they depended upon to appear against Everhart had left the city to secure work elsewhere.

Defendant admitted the charge but declared that he worked the scheme while under the influence of liquor.

BEER AT LUNCH COUNTER.

THE SELLER IS CONVICTED.

S. Mendelsohnn pleaded guilty in Police Court yesterday afternoon to selling liquor in his cigar store and lunch counter, No. 6190 Pasadena avenue. He will be sentenced today.

Plainclothesmen Ferns and Hickey learned that beer was sold at the lunch counter and they investigated. After eating lunch several times and becoming acquainted with Mendelsohnn they suggested beer and it was served them, they said in court yesterday afternoon.

Mendelsohnn attempted to excuse the offense by saying that he had been ill and was very much in need of money. The sentence was postponed a day to give the court time to investigate Mendelsohnn's story.

WILL GET PERMIT.

COLE'S SENTENCE SUSPENDED.

Increased Consumpti Oil in South.

Los Angeles Territ Making Strides.

General News of I from Oil Fields.

The increased consumption all by Los Angeles and the tributary will soon make it ly necessary to provide p transportation from the San Valley fields to this city. T Lash-Boerman and the City are no longer adequate to m demands of the southern consu fuel oil, and the production fields cannot in any way be in

What is known as the Los market includes Southern Ca Arizona and parts of Neva Utah. But a small part of used to supply this territory this port by way of the Pacific In addition to the oil supplied local fields, the Los Angeles c ers have drawn heavily upon t Joaquin, and the only means of portation is by rail. This is a expensive but restrictive, inasm regular shipments of supplie cannot be made.

There is no doubt in the mi all men that a pipe line from t Joaquin Valley oil fields would ly increase the consumption of this territory. Months ago U Jenny and Union Oil Company in fathered a scheme to build a pi from the Kern county fields to ...rono, organizing the California ...ons Pipe Line Company with ...talization of $25,000,000. This is still dormant. Soon thereaf was announced that the Southern cific had surveyed a route for a line from the Sunset field to L The project has got no farther the surveying stage.

In the meantime the big Los A consumers, fearing the pinch of adequate supply of oil at what considered a high price, organized Los Angeles Oil Consumers' As tion. At the time of organizat was announced that the plans o association included the building timately of a pipe line from the Joaquin Valley oil fields to Los geles. After the organization was der way the association asked for ...en 70,000 barrels of oil monthly for use of its members. MIDWAY'S FIVE'S BIG WELL.

W. T. Wheatley, vice-president of the Midway Five Oil Company, with offices in the Story building, telegraphed from the field yesterday that the company's well No. 1 had broken loose yesterday morning early with a flow that would equal 20,000 barrels a day. The oil shot over the top of the derrick and fell into sumpholes that had been provided.

The Midway Five Oil Company has a lease on thirty acres on section 2, 32-23, and the property is only one-half mile from the big gusher of the Midway Premier Company which came in three weeks ago. Well No. 1 is 2200 feet deep and reached the oil sand with the 8½ inch casing. It is perforated for a distance of 150 feet. The well first began to flow about six weeks ago, and after intermittent activity sanded up. The OIL INDUSTRY.

PIPE LINE IS BADLY NEEDED.

Increased Consumption of Oil in South.

Los Angeles Territory Is Making Strides.

General News of Interest from Oil Fields.

The increased consumption of fuel oil by Los Angeles and the country tributary will soon make it absolutely necessary to provide pipe line transportation from the San Joaquin Valley fields to this city. The Salt Lack-Sherman and the City fields are no longer adequate to supply the demands of the southern consumers of fuel oil, and the production of these fields cannot in any way be increased.

What is known as the Los Angeles market includes Southern California, Arizona and parts of Nevada and Utah. But a small part of the oil used to supply this territory reaches this port by way of the Pacific ocean. In addition to the oil supplied by the local fields, the Los Angeles consumers have drawn heavily upon the San Joaquin, and the only mode of transportation is by rail. This is not only expensive but restrictive, inasmuch as regular shipments of required size cannot be made.

There is no doubt in the minds of oil men that a pipe line from the San Joaquin Valley oil fields would greatly increase the consumption of oil in this territory. Months ago the Doheny and Union Oil Company interests fathered a scheme to build a pipe line from the Kern county fields into Arizona, organizing the California-Arizona Pipe Line Company with a capitalization of $25,000,000. This project is still dormant. Soon thereafter it was announced that the Southern Pacific had surveyed a route for a pipe line from the Sunset field to Mojave. The project has got no farther than the surveying stage.

In the meantime the big Los Angeles consumers, feeling the pinch of an inadequate supply of oil at what they considered a high price, organized the Los Angeles Oil Consumers' Association. At the time of organization it was announced that the plans of the association included the building ultimately of a pipe line from the San Joaquin Valley oil fields to Los Angeles. After the organization was under way the association asked for bids on 70,000 barrels of oil monthly for the use of its members. The two bids received were double or more than the price of crude oil at the wells, and were rejected.

At the present time the rail shipments of oil out of the San Joaquin Valley are very heavy, aggregating 1,000,000 barrels a month, the greater part of which comes over the "pass" and into the southern territory. Since the oil business is growing right along, and other traffic is increasing by leaps and bounds, it would seem that the Southern Pacific must either build a pipe line or double track the road over the mountains.

The K. T. & O. (Southern Pacific Oil Company) ships 125,000 barrels of oil a month from Kern River, Sunset and McKittrick and 50,000 barrels from Coalinga. The Associated makes no rail shipments from Coalinga, but sends by tank cars from the four Kern county fields about 300,000 barrels a month. From Kern River and Midway the Santa Fe hauls 225,000 barrels every thirty days and the Standard 65,000 barrels, with the Southern Pacific adding between 3000 and 4000 barrels a day for its own use. Assuming that three-fourths of these shipments go over the "pass" the amount is sufficient to keep a pipe line busy, without taking additional new business into consideration.

Another proposition would be shipments via the Pacific. The big marketers have pipe line connections from the fields with the northern coast, and the Associated and Union companies have pipe lines from Los Angeles to San Pedro. They also have tank ships.

BISBEE, (Ariz.), (Exclusive Dispatch). The second oil strike recorded in this vicinity within three weeks was reported today from the Santa Barbara ranch, in the Santa Cruz section of Sonora, Mex. Senor Maa Carenas, owner of the ranch, declared today he had been offered 1,000,000 pesos for the land. He says he refused—cents!!

It is also reported that prospectors on the American side in Cochise county, Arizona, have encountered a small flow. The first strike occurred at Bowie in the northern part of the county and the field has been pronounced first-class by experts.

PIPE LINES ARE BUSY.

The pumping plants of the Associated Oil Company at Taft and Sunset are now in operation, and oil from the Lakeview is now going through that line and also the line of the Producers' Transportation Company, at the rate of 40,000 barrels a day. The big earthen reservoirs on the flat are being rapidly emptied.

About 1,700,000 barrels of Lakeview oil have been taken away so far, and the Agency will continue to handle all it possibly can. The oil goes into storage along the Associated and Producers' lines as far as tidewater. The agency is also preparing to handle oil from Midway and Sunset from other producers, and is taking the usual amount from the American Oilfields Company and from the Santa Fe.

McKittrick oil is now moving to Kern river storage. The Producers' line at Coalinga and on to tidewater is now devoted exclusively to Coalinga oil, and from 16,000 to 18,000 barrels a day is being run.

MIDWAY'S FIVE'S BIG WELL.

W. T. Wheatley, vice-president of the Midway Five Oil Company, with offices in the Story building, telegraphed from the field yesterday that the company's well No. 1 had broken loose yesterday morning early with a flow that would equal 20,000 barrels a day. The oil shot over the top of the derrick and fell into cumpholes that had been provided.

The Midway Five Oil Company has a lease on thirty acres on section 5, 32-22, and the property is only one-half mile from the big gusher of the Midway Premier Company which came in three weeks ago. Well No. 1 is 2200 feet deep and reached the oil sand with the 8¼ inch casing. It is perforated for a distance of 150 feet. The well first began to flow about six weeks ago, and after intermittent activity sanded up. The company had a contract with the Standard to take its production, and prior to yesterday had delivered over 25,000 barrels of oil.

The management had attached a gate valve to the casing in the effort to keep the well under control, but when the gusher broke loose yesterday morning at 6 o'clock the gate was torn off by the pressure and a big stream of oil shot airward. There are lines connecting the Midway Five sumps with the tanks of the Standard Oil Company and the oil is being pumped into these tanks. The oil from this well tests 21½ gravity.

Well No. 2 of the Midway Five is now down over 900 feet, and the lumber is on the ground for well No. 3. The officers of the company are: President, R. M. Henningsen; vice-president, W. T. Wheatley; secretary, F. L. Bortallis. The company began operations last spring.

Attitude of Government.

Willis N. Mills, a government attorney who has been in Los Angeles several days listening to the arguments in the cases of George D. Roberts and Edmund Burke against the Southern Pacific before the Federal tribunal, has had all the arguments taken in shorthand. He said yesterday that as soon as his stenographer had transcribed the proceedings, and he had gone carefully over them he would be able to tell whether or not the government would institute an action against the railroad company. Millions of dollars worth of oil lands are in controversy.

BUILDERS MAKE BIGGEST NOVEMBER SHOWING.

Valuation Total Is Seven Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars Ahead of the Best Corresponding Period in Any Other Year—Almost a Thousand Permits Issued.

The best November in the history of building activity in Los Angeles was officially ended yesterday noon in the offices of the City Building Department. The valuation total of $3,228,663 for the month was $750,000 ahead of the best corresponding period in any year and the permit total of 949 items was also the record for the month of November.

The month was the second largest of the present record-breaking year, being exceeded only by April, which boasted $3,360,000. It is moreover the third biggest month in the history of the city in point of valuation, being exceeded also by June, 1908, which had an aggregate of $2,371,000.

To date for the year permits to the number of 9023 have been issued by the chief inspector of buildings, these representing an aggregate valuation of $30,211,300. The best previous calendar year record is that of 1908 with 9072 permits and $18,158,620 valuation. The December report will bring 1910 into the lead by considerably over $3,000,000.

THEY'RE "OLD-TIMERS."

Federal Jurors Discuss the Length of Time They've Been in Southern California.

While banished from the United States Circuit Court room yesterday to allow the lawyers to wrangle over a legal point, the jurors in the suit of Christina W. Sandidge against the Santa Fe fell to discussing the length of their residence in Southern California and found that they were a bunch of "old timers."

Walter F. Poor headed the list, having come here thirty-nine years ago. Harry M. Carlette followed him four years later. Porter H. Mathews was third, with twenty-nine years to his credit.

The total of their residences here was 200 years, or an average of twenty-five years for each man. The other jurors and the length of time since they were first introduced to this climate follow:

The hearing was not completed yesterday and will be resumed when court convenes this morning. Mrs. Sandidge is suing for damages for the death of her husband, a Santa Fe freight conductor, who was killed while trying to set the brakes on a runaway car of ore, when it jumped the tracks and was wrecked.

FOR MORE FAIR DEALING.

Government Begins the Prosecution of Many Cases in Which Trickery Is Charged.

Asst. United States Attorney Horton left last night for Fresno, where he will represent the government in taking testimony in the suit of the United States against Harry Spence.

The case is the first of a long series which the government has instituted against holders of property who are alleged to have practiced fraud in getting their patents.

This campaign is one branch of a general attack against frauds in all departments of the government, and is in accordance with a more strict enforcement of the policy of honest dealing.

Dozens of persons in this State are said to have obtained the land of which they are now in possession by having practiced deceptions of various kinds.

The government is inquiring into all of the patents which have been issued in the past ten years. It is likely that it will not attempt to interfere with lands which were patented before that time, as they have in most cases been sold several times, the present holders having bought them in good faith.

Even the special investigators, whose business it is to deal with persons who are not averse to practicing tricks for monetary gain, have been surprised at the frauds which are connected with the acquirement of the public domain. The government seems to have been considered as legitimate prey.

The suit against Spence is an equitable proceeding for the purpose of cancelling his patent and causing the land to revert to Uncle Sam. The procedure is to take all of the testimony before a special examiner. It will then be referred to the Judge of the Circuit Court, who will decide the merits of the controversy.

There are many similar cases in Southern California. They will come to hearings in a short time.

THEY SHOW BIG INCREASE.

Receipts in the customhouse and the postoffice show large increased during the month of November over similar periods last year. The receipts for the customhouse during November, 1910, 1909 and 1908 were $81,787.49, $70,266.45, and $22,685.12, respectively. During the month just passed $114,457.12 was taken in from the sale of postage stamps, while last year the stamp sales for November aggregated $100,635.80.

DUCKS MAKE TROUBLE.

CAFE HAD TOO MANY.

Deputy Game Warden Palmer engaged in a "wild duck chase" yesterday that was productive of a $10 fine in Police Court yesterday morning.

The game warden suspected that a down-town cafe was harboring more wild ducks than the law allowed at one time and the trail led to the ice box. Tucked away in cold corners the warden discovered thirteen ducks awaiting orders from the cafe. As twenty-five ducks are allowed, the warden believed for a time that his search was fruitless but he decided to look further. He did so and found twenty-one more in a sack.

John W. Dowdle, chief steward, was arrested. The fine is generally heavy for violations of the game law but after urging that the new consignment of ducks had been received before they were due and that the steward had never before been arrested on a similar charge, the court said $10 was enough.

THE TARIFF CONTEST.

So the tariff fight is to be renewed in Congress. There will be four forces in the field—the stand-patters, who will favor leaving the present tariff alone; the insurgents, who will favor revision downward, combined with a preservation of the policy of protection; the mitigated Democrats, who will be likely to combine with the insurgents, and the unmitigated Democrats, who will demand a tariff for revenue only, and let the devil take the manufacturers and their workmen.

The principal theme in the Democratic orchestra will be that the Republican tariff is the cause of the high cost of living. If this were true—as it certainly is not true, so far as food and fuel are concerned, for they are not affected by the tariff—the intelligent worker will not be convinced that he will be benefited by a policy that might reduce the cost of his living one dollar, but which would at the same time reduce his wages three dollars.

The result of a tariff for revenue only would inevitably be to lessen the home market for American manufacturers, and compel us to search beyond seas for customers who have been in the habit of buying goods made in Europe by men and women whose existence is less comfortable, and whose diet is less nutritious than that of the kenneled dogs who sniff at them contemptuously as they tramp to their daily toil.

The result of a tariff for revenue only would be to lower the wages of American workers, and enable us to manufacture goods for foreign markets, from which we are now excluded because of the lower cost of European manufactures that are made with cheaper labor. But what shall it profit the American manufacturer if he gain the markets of the whole world and lose those of his own country?

If the tariff is reduced upon any imported article, the immediate effect will be to reduce its price. The price of a similar article manufactured in America will have to be reduced in order to meet the cut. Such reduction in price will reduce the wages of the men engaged in making that article. Then the purchasing power of the worker being reduced, the farmer and the producer of all articles of use and beauty, must in turn lower prices. But what result other than a disastrous one can come to a people from an all-around slump in prices, and a heavy exportation of gold to pay for articles which were previously produced at home?

THE REVOLT OF ULSTER.

Perhaps some of us can still remember the days when the London "Thunderer" was mercilessly hammering Charles Stuart Parnell and his lieutenants in a series of the most remarkable articles ever published in a great daily newspaper. A scoundrel, named Pigott, sold a forged letter to the Times, purporting to be signed by Parnell himself, which urged the murders of Secretary Burke and Lord Frederick Cavendish by Brady and his fellow-conspirators. For publishing this letter—which Editor Walters had accepted in perfectly good faith—he was mulcted in the largest sum of damages ever enacted in a suit for libel. At that time the Orangemen loudly applauded the London Times for its campaign against lawlessness, and sympathized with Editor Walters in his misfortune. There was no sturdier defender of the integrity of the empire than the loyal Orangeman.

Now mark the difference in this present day of grace. With home rule for Ireland well in sight, the men of Ulster, who under the old regime were the strongest supporters of submission to the law, are going to more violent extremes than Parnell ever dared to do in his stormiest moments. A Presbyterian minister, ordained to preach the gospel of peace, has moved a resolution at a meeting of the Ulster delegates embodying the principle of open rebellion and authorizing the private purchase of arms and equipment of regiments. Lord Londonderry, who owes his title and estate to the law-abiding sentiment of the people of Great Britain, has indorsed this programme of revolt and armed resistance.

The Ulster men are setting a dangerous precedent. Should the Home Rule party fail at the coming elections, they are putting into the hands of the Nationalists a weapon which, so far, they have refrained from using. Of course, it is hard for us, in peaceful California, to understand the bitter feeling of animosity between the Scotch-Irish of the north of Ireland and the Celtic-Irish of the south and west. The present imbroglio in Ireland resembles a gigantic Kentucky feud, and the solving of the problem of autonomy, to the satisfaction of all parties concerned, seems almost beyond the reach of human genius.

Salisbury and Gladstone tackled the thorny question from diametrically opposite points of view; coercion and conciliation both proved futile. That Asquith and Birrell or Balfour and Austen Chamberlain—according to which party wins at the coming election—will be more successful than their predecessors is a consummation devoutly to be wished, but hardly to be expected. The millennium, when "the lion shall lie down with the lamb and a little child lead them both," is a very far cry to the passionate-souled children of the Emerald Isle. Still in the ears of the Irish patriot ring the burning verses of Tom Moore, destroying the idle dream of rest where no rest may be—

"With thee were the dreams of my earliest love,
Every hope of my childhood was thine;
In my last humble prayer to the spirit above,
Thy name shall be mingled with mine.
O blest are the lovers and friends who shall live
The days of thy glory to see;
But the next dearest blessing that heaven can give
Is the pride of thus dying for thee."

Hiram Johnson spent but little for railroad fare during his recent campaign, according to the figures of his expense account. Is it possible that he traveled on an S. P. pass? Horrible thought.

"THE LAST STRAW".

OWN UP AND SHUT UP.

The advice given by the Kentucky horse racer to his son was to "crow lightly when you win, and own up, pay up, and shut up when you get beat." This wise advice has been totally disregarded by the Works organ. Its idea of a political race is to stand by the result and claim the stakes when you win, and repudiate the result and grab the stakes when you lose. Like the seraphim and the cherubim, it continually do cry, and the burden of its wail is Works! Works!! Works!!! Its argument is thus: "The Senatorial advisory law, which provides for giving popular advice by districts is a wicked, wicked law, enacted by a debauched Legislature, at the instance of a malignant and never-to-be-sufficiently-damned railroad corporation. There ought to have been a law that provided for a State-wide, instead of a district Senatorial advice to legislators how to vote for United States Senator. Since there is nothing legally binding in the advice given to legislators—since it is only binding morally, and most of them have no morals, why, then, let the legislators be governed, not by an accepted wicked law that is, but by a rejected law that ought to have been. The law should have been that whoever received a plurality of the State-wide votes should be chosen as Senator. We will proceed upon the basis that what ought to have been done should govern, rather than what was done. Works received 35.03 per cent., while Spalding received but 35.01 per cent. of the popular vote. The fact that Spalding carried sixty-four districts, being a majority of all the districts in the State, while Works carried only forty districts, and the further fact that the sixty-four legislators advised for Spalding constitute a majority of the entire Legislature, and that if they follow the advice of their constituents they must elect Spalding upon the first ballot, are, in the opinion of the Works organ, totally irrelevant and inconsequential facts. When we say to one contemporary, "Your conclusion does not agree with the facts or the law," it replies, "so much the worse for the facts and the law."

This kindergarten logic has never been excelled except by the first gravedigger in Hamlet, "Here lies the water, there stands the man. Now if the man go to the water and drown himself, why, willy-nilly, he goes. But if the water come to the man and drown him—he drowns not himself. Argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life."

It is beating the air with mere words to discuss the Senatorial question at all, for there is no Senatorial question to discuss. What moral right has a legislator from San Diego, who has been instructed or "advised" by his constituents to vote for Spalding, and whose vote, given in accordance with the advice of his constituents, will elect Spalding, to vote for somebody else who is indorsed by the people of Trinity county?

The Times never favored the enactment of the advisory law for the election of Senators, any more than it would have favored the election of most judges of a moot court for the trial of causes. A law that is not a law, a law for the breaking of which no penalty is fixed, and for the enforcement of which no tribunals are provided, is simply brutem fulmen, and not a law at all. But, since the Goo-Goos invoked its provisions, and ex-Councilman Works wakened the echoes from Humboldt Bay to Tia Juana praising it, and declaring that he would stand or fall by it, and that he did not want the Senatorship unless he could gain it by virtue of the operations of the law—why let him swallow the dose he prepared for Spalding and look pleasant about it.

RESURRECTION.

You can never be quite sure when a ghost is laid, or a restless child really put to sleep, or a fashion discarded for good and all. We once indulged a foolish hope that with the death of Ignatius Donelly, populism, the silver fallacy, and the Shakespeare-Bacon dispute would also sleep the sleep that knows no ending. The first two of this triolet have really entered the long rest of well-earned oblivion, but Sir Edward Dunning-Lawrence has resurrected Donelly's last ghost, disturbed the slumbering infant and refashioned the garments of that time-soiled controversy. The Bacon-Shakespeare tempest is raging once more.

The genius that wrote the lines, "What's in a name? That which we call a rose by any other name would smell as sweet," must smile sardonically under his heavenly halo, when solemn pedants on earth are tearing a passion into tatters to prove that by changing the name of a flower, the perfume and the beauty can be either increased or obliterated. We have the plays and the poetry and the magic of the master—thank heaven!—eternally preserved for us. What matters it whether the fruit be put up in tin cans or glass jars, so long as it keeps?

We doubt whether many theological students could name the actual writers who in the reign of James the First gave us our Bible in its present form and diction. But the grand old book has lost none of its inspiration on that account. The name of Shakespeare has long been connected with the world's greatest dramas; what advantage should we gain by re-christening them with the less euphonius title of "Bacon's?"

Mark Twain, with his shrewd, common-sensical humor, summed up the whole matter when he solemnly explained that the works of William Shakespeare were not written by William Shakespeare, but by another gentleman of the same name. All right, Mark, we'll let it go at that.

UNCLE WALT

The Poet Philosopher.

The lovely waitress, white and pink, brings me the crisp and sizzling link of sausage with some buckwheat cakes, and I relieve my inward aches. And as I eat, my thoughts astray go roaming in a futile way. The noble dogs of St. Bernard! How well and bravely do they guard the snowy passes of the Alps, and drag lost pilgrims by the scalps to rest and shelter where the monks have heaped the fire with goodly chunks! The shepherd dogs of Scotia's hills! Their loyalty my bosom thrills! How well they watch their masters' flocks, among the heather and the rocks! The dogs of bleak Newfoundland's shore, that dare the angry breaker's roar, to drag some swimmer from the foam, to friends and life and joy and home! The tawny bloodhound, fierce and bold, that holds the trial o'er fen and wold, with foam flecks on his lion jaw—how ably he assists the law! We find our noble friends, the dogs, from Afric's sands to Breton's fogs; I love them, be they blind or lame; I love them, be they wild or tame; I love them in the city's streets, and in the country's cool retreats; and yet I love them best, methinks, when they're not fashioned into links.

A Journey in Epigrams.

Don C. Seitz, of the New York World, author of "Elba and Elsewhere" writes travel books on a new plan, omitting the itinerary altogether and making the comment as brief and epigrammatic as possible. Some of his sayings are:

"To see Europe comfortably one should possess a rubber collar and a rubber neck."

"The contents of a sepulcher cannot be judged always by its artistic merits."

"The Marseilles newspapers really print news. Those of Paris talk politics and scandal, and have the big circulations."

"There is but one woman's club in Paris, and that is composed of ladies from the American colony."

"At Monte Carlo the cropier sometimes runs out of change. This is called 'breaking the bank.'"

"In Germany the father is the head of the family, in France the mother, in England the eldest son, in America the daughter."

BURDETTE AT THE BAT.

XLII.

The Meanness of the Candy Thief.

The fact that the government has girded on its two-handed sword with the terrible name, mounted its favorite war horse, and with visor—not to speak of advisor—down, and lance in rest, is charging up to the mouth of the fearsome cavern wherein lairs the Sugar giant, excites by a thrill of interest at this time. Because, we have been looking until our eyes are wearied with the strain of the fixed gaze, at the mouth of the other cavern wherein the great giant Rocky Feller canned himself when the same government smote him a fine $29,000,000 blow with the Sword of a Thousand Exceptions. We have been—at least for a few years we were anxious to observe whether the government would presently emerge from the Oilwell cave with the hairless scalp of the venerable giant draggin' from its saddle bow, or whether directly—oil derrickly, one might say, the giant's office boy, Standard D'Oyle, would come out to add the osseous remains of the government to the display of skulls and ribs of other knights who had gone into the muzzle and had come out swallowed. Meanwhile, a circus parade went by and we all followed the band down street and forgot what we had been looking at.

But now that the government, armed cap-a-pie, has once again ridden back to take its jousting distance, and there is once more promise that somebody will be unhorsed unless he dismounts before the lances splinter against the opposing shields and scales, we return to our ordinary occupations, leaving a call with the nightwatchman, in case anything worth getting up to see, should happen.

Oil stealings do not have for the community the sentimental interest which marks the pilferings and robberies of the sugar thieves. On the roadways, in the fire-box, or in the lamp, oil is not the pleasantest stuff to handle. It seems impossible for it to deodorise itself. And about the oil fields it appears to be in such a condition of chronic and general waste, that it seems to be a foolish thing to steal. Very few men—and no ladies—would stop the automobile, and looking cautiously around to be sure that nobody was watching, steal a pailfull of crude oil.

I suppose it would be wrong to do it. But I hardly see why, as no sane person would do it, even under as positive assurance of immunity, as though he had stolen $29,000,000 worth.

But sugar is different. There is a protection of sentiment about it, from its infancy. There is a fine of $5, in the Hawaiian Islands, for stealing a stalk of cane from the fields. And I've seen the time when I thought it was worth the fine. A man who has never crunched and sucked the sweetness of sugar cane has lost a dream of childhood out of his life.

You never feel that way about oil. Not even castor oil.

Sugar is grown in an atmosphere of romance and sentiment. We hear in memory, or fancy—much the same thing—the songs of the slaves in our own land of the free—the slaves who in our own songs about them always toiled in de cotton an' de cane, which was supposed to grow in one unbroken chapparal from the Ohio to the Gulf, and who were so happy they never ran away unless they had the chance. They sang when they got up at 4 o'clock in the morning, and sang all day long, with occasional intervals of dancing, and rides on the Tennessee or the Suwanee—always one or the other, in de old gum tree canoe, until the sun went down, when immediately the moon—which was full every night, came up—it always came up at 7:30, when the banjoes were brought out and dancing was resumed, with intervals for roast possum—always in season—and singing until daylight. Then breakfast, and the immediate resumption of musical toil in the fields of cane. Happy, happy, dear old days of slavery and sugar cane—Uncle Tom, Little Eva, Two Topsy's, Two Donkeys, and Two Markses.

Some of these we have still with us. How can a white man steal sugar by the million pounds when he thinks of these happy old days which make the very memory of sugar sweet?

And how can any white man, who steals a million dollars worth of [illegible] and makes a swift and silent get-away with it, censure a poor, ignorant old colored man who de-roosts a pullet worth not more than 75 cents? Who is it, anyhow, that charges the colored race with tendency toward the benevolent assimilation of poultry? Surely, no member of the sugar trust would sit by and silently hear his humble associate in the sugar industry accused of dishonesty?

And then, the sweets that are dear to our childhood, are at least chemically associated with sugar. And in the old days, ere science taught us how to make pure maple syrup all the year round, out of old leather shoes and one thing and another, there was always more or less sugar in the striped sticks of candy, with flavor of peppermint and sassafras. To steal sugar then, is in our minds associated with stealing candy from a child.

The associations of sugar are sweet in their domestic flavors. The smiling face of innocent childhood, gaumed until it was sticky as fly paper, haunted by happy flies that could get away when they chose, and stained with pigments of the playground and the street. The white cubes, made sweeter by the dainty fingers which dropped them into the cup of steaming tea. The delicate confections nestling in most artistic boxes, bearing love's message from the timid swain to the capricious beauty. The intellectual lozenges, sweet stimulants to lagging conversations, each with its idiotic question or most imbecile answers. Marsh mallow, caramel, gumdrop and "all-day sucker." And, oldest in the romance of the sweets, the home-made candies, the molasses taffy, memories of roystering, "candy pullin's;" roaring fires in great throated chimneys; old folk seated along the walls and the kitchen cleared for dancing; orchestra of one fiddler, and the fiddler "callin'-off;" "barn dances" that didn't have to be tagged for identification; merry rhythm of dancing feet that could be heard a half a mile down the snow-drifted road—steps and mazes that drowned the shrieking fiddler—"Jine hands an circle to the left!" "Ladies chain!" "Alaman left" "Balance all!" "Do-se-do!" "All promenade!" "First gent forrad an back!"

And when the little assembly was too religious for dancing—the kissing and the squeezing forfeit games—the racing and the screechings and the hugging games that were not such all-fired bad substitutes for dancing—Oh, Girls!

Well, now, how can any man steal sugar when its sweetness is made by these associations of youth and childhood, of innocence and happiness, of love and romance, of dancing feet and throbbing hearts, of soft hands and melting eyes, of tender vows, and faithful promises—how can a man think of these things and then steal sugar by the ton? How can he think of these things and then shake back an ounce or two out of the scoop into the barrel to increase his retail profit?

I can understand that, after he tramped around in the stinking mire of an oil field with a hundred sump holes, a man might steal oil under the perfectly honest impression that that's what the stuff was made for. But how can he steal sugar?

Let there be no mercy for the sugar thieves. Chain them down to the granite floor of the deepest and darkest dungeon beneath the castle moat. Nay, rather, smear them with a cheap grade of brown sugar, and set them in the market place where the flies can get at them.

Steal the baby's candy, will you?

REMARKS BY THE STAFF.

Farewell Tours.

Thinking of what Gen. Sherman said about good Indians, it may be remarked that the only actors who have really made farewell tours are dead actors.

The Reason Why.

It has been put forward in the way of a possible explanation that the reason father always receives slippers for a Christmas present is that he is visibly affected with cold feet for at least two weeks prior to the glad day.

The Status of Ellen Terry.

A local dramatic critic says that those who paid money to see Ellen Terry in Los Angeles saw not Ellen the actress but Ellen the woman. Had this been known beforehand the audience would not have been so large.

A Sure Cure.

The man who has come to Los Angeles and gets homesick for the old place back yonder can usually acquire a cure by a visit to the locality from whence he emigrated. It is the same way with the man who hungers to see an old sweetheart upon whom he has not set eyes for many years.

"The Makings."

A man blew into The Times office the other night and said that he saw a good fight down the street between a Dutchman and an Irishman. A red-headed reporter informed him that it takes two Dutchman and an Irishman to make a good fight

Our Up-Coast Rivals.

When the census bureau made official announcement of the population of Los Angeles they say it rained something awful in Portland and Seattle.

Kind Word for Germans.

No matter what faults the Germans may have as a people, it must always be remembered with gratitude that they invented Santa Claus.

Another Truth Discovered.

It has now been settled beyond every possibility of dispute that while a pecan punch is a concoction that tastes like a temperance drink, it is nothing of the kind.

A Recommendation.

If there be a man in this community who desires to fully convince himself that life is a matter of mutations, a shifting, elusive thing that wriggles and slips from the grasp like the specter of a shadow, let him arrange to have himself installed in the office of chief of police of the city of Los Angeles.

A Timely Query.

If "business is a competition in fraud," as Robert Louis Stevenson said, how is it that so many pious men like John D. Rockefeller manage to amass such enormous fortunes?

Seriously Speaking.

The real Christmas spirit is not the giving of gifts—although that is all very well—but it is to feel that He who was born in the little town of Bethlehem nineteen hundred years ago was the Savior of the world who died upon a cross for men's salvation.

Of Interest to Almost All.

What interests one man may not interest another. For instance, if some one shouts that a pretty woman is crossing the street on a rainy day it cannot possibly be of interest to a [illegible] man.

THE POLITICAL WATCHTOWER.

Consequently the Socialists and the laborites will join hands and, in the next city campaign, make what the circus people know as the "double slide for life."

When Victor Berger, the Socialist Mayor of Milwaukee, said recently that the next city to have a Socialist Mayor would be Los Angeles, he spoke with a full knowledge of a secret scheme.

The plan has been hatched out by the union labor leaders in the East.

They have come to the conclusion that a strike can never succeed in Los Angeles. The more money they put into the fight, the worse the strike seems to fail.

Wherefore, they are going after Los Angeles with ballots.

The Socialists are to put up a candidate for Mayor and he is to have the backing of the national council of the American Federation of Labor.

The national labor leaders have agreed to back the fight with unlimited coin. They are said to have guaranteed a fund of $100,000 to start with and as much more as is necessary.

Arrangements are said to have been perfected by Job Harriman on his recent visit to the East.

From past experience, the Socialists and the laborites would have very little confidence in their campaign, no matter how much money backed it, were it not for another element. This is the division of the opposition.

The Socialists gleefully expect to see the worst cut-up city campaign in the history of this city.

Their information is that the Lissnerites have split with Mayor Alexander. The rock upon which the wreck occurred was the veto by the Mayor of the aqueduct bond contract.

The Socialists are informed that if Lissner & Co. dump Alexander, Uncle Aleck will run as an independent candidate.

C. O. Hawley, the fire commissioner, and Martin Betkouski are also said to be meditating campaigns for the office of Mayor on their own hook.

The Democrats have already declared their intention of running either Tim Spellacy or Police Commissioner Willborn for the job.

It is regarded as a matter of course that the regular Republicans will also have a candidate. Against this badly-split field, the Socialists and union laborites think they have a chance.

I am told that the Socialists have not yet definitely hit upon a candidate for Mayor; but if Stitt Wilson can be made eligible, they are for him.

Stitt not being available, they look to Fred C. Wheeler, who made so hot a race against Uncle Aleck when he first ran for Mayor.

I hardly need say that the object of the labor unionites in trying to grab the city government is to change the laws. They have found that dynamiting and picketing and thuggery stand no chance of success as long as the city government isn't "fixed." If they can get control of the city government, they can wipe the picketing ordinance off the books and make the police short-sighted in time of strikes and union labor violence.

I understand there is some doubt, after all, about Mike Casey being appointed State Harbor Commissioner.

Charles F. Curry seems to demand the job. They tell me that Curry and Mike are trying to jolly each other into taking something else. Mike wants Curry to run for Mayor of San Francisco instead.

My one best bet is on Mike for Harbor Commissioner. He will never let go of a plum like that.

It is not only big politically, but the president of the Board of Harbor Commissioners holds the whole labor situation of the San Francisco water front in the hollow of his hand.

When Mike gets in control, I feel sorry for the independent ship owners who have been trying to carry on business with non-union crews.

When Casey sold out the support of the unions, he got a big price from Hiram Johnson. It was an astonishment to me when I looked into the matter the other day and found out what a big bunch of patronage goes with that job. It's something tremendous.

The president of the Harbor Commission, himself, gets $3600; the other two members of the board get $3000 each. There are at least 300 employees to be appointed. They include everything from private secretaries and attorneys-at-law at big salaries, to plasterers and carpenters.

The Harbor Commissioners have the appointment of the crews of two State tug boats and the crew of a State railroad.

There are highly-paid inspectors and wharfingers and laborers and janitors and sub-assistant janitors by squadrons to be appointed.

Mike certainly came high.

Some of the National Guard officers are trying to induce Gov. Johnson to cut out the usual political staff of non-military officers and to have only three or four aides chosen from the line officers of the National Guard.

CHAMP CLARK'S MULES.

[Omaha Bee]

Champ Clark has said that if elected speaker of the House he would drive a span of mules down Pennsylvania avenue in Washington. It looks as if the Missourian would have the opportunity of making good on his freak promise. He is re-elected, his party has gained control of the House and he will probably be its choice for a speaker.

But it is not distinction of this sort that Mr. Clark and his party will most need. On the contrary, they will need to resist such tendencies. They have already been driving mules too much. They have been handicapped by mulish caprice too long. That is one reason they have not been entrusted with power more often. The country has feared their lack of dignity and their lack of stability. It has not in this temporary turn of the tide expressed any special confidence in the Democracy. The conditions by which Mr. Clark and his party gain the ascendency in the lower branch of Congress cannot be construed into popular esteem of the Democracy and the things it has stood for. The result is rather negative in character, so far as the Democrats are concerned.

They will do well, therefore, not to mistake this fact and conduct themselves accordingly. At best, they are only installed on probation. What is done in 1912 depends, no doubt, very largely on how they deport themselves between this and that. There will be enough mule driving and braying which Mr. Clark would like to prevent, and so it would become him to go out of his way to do it himself.

POLITICAL WATCHTOWER.

GAY LIFE OF THE CITY.

BY A CLUBMAN.

Where there is so much fire, there must be some smoke. You can see smoke in rings and in clouds at the new quarters of the University Club Saturday night, when an informal house-warming will be held. It will be in the nature of a smoker and buffet lunch and it is expected that most of the 605 members will be present. Everything will be free as air and from 6:30 o'clock until a much later hour the good fellowship of the club will be at its high tide.

These handsome new quarters are on the eighth floor of the Consolidated Realty Company building at Sixth and Hill streets. Breakfast, lunch and dinner are served to members in a handsome big dining-room and the ladies' dining-room is open from 6 to 8 each evening.

After having been located in their old quarters at 249 Hill street for five years, the members are glad to have room in which to expand. In the old quarters the combustible chess games between Dr. Bullard and President Frederick Stevenson monopolized the attention of the library floor. There is now room for Austin Martin's bridge game and even room for the portly proportions of Attorney A. P. Thompson when he chooses to move from one bridge table to the next. There is even room for the smile of the Very Rev. William McCormack, Dean of St. Paul's, who is a jolly good clubman, and for the bachelor comforts of Attorney George Dryer.

By the way, it is whispered that George Dryer has confessed that the reason he never proposed to a girl in his life, was that he dreaded the ordeal of getting down on his knees. Attorney Thompson is trying to claim credit for having first suggested this reason. It must be admitted that Thompson is just as fat as Dryer and also that he is just as fair and as near forty.

Jimmy Copp, Jr., says that this is all rot about the knee-bending propositions, declaring that the real reason that neither himself nor his fat legal brethren were ever married, is that they are unable to separate sentiment from reality. They have simply gone on in their obstinacy, creating dream women out of smoke rings, and then when they see the genuine article who is a thousand times as good as any dream, they are scared out of their boots and have no notion of how to act.

Proposals for the hand of either of these sensitive and retiring gentlemen will be received by Col. M. L. Graff, who as a diplomat, a bridge player, a traveler and a bachelor, is entitled to referee any passage at arms between Cupid and single members of any club in the city. Col. Graff's recent return from an extensive tour of Europe, in which he was shown more courtesies than William Jennings Bryan when abroad, and nearly as many courtesies as Theodore Roosevelt, has added no end to the dignity of Los Angeles clubdom. It is said that while abroad Col. Graff was offered a portfolio as Prime Minister to any number of kingdoms, and that he might have married a throne. Anyway, all Europe and most of Africa, did its best to enthrall him, and nothing but his strong sense of duty tow[illegible] Los Angeles brought him back across the troubled waters.

I don't know if I ought to say this out loud, but speaking of smokers reminds me that in at least one section of the city there is quite a division in high society over women and cigarettes. This division is between the ladies who do and the ladies who do not. You do not believe all that you see in the newspapers but the fact remains that truth is always stranger than fiction, and that some of the cigar stores in Los Angeles make a specialty of delicately perfumed cigarettes for women and sell them by the tens of thousands.

Of course I do not pretend to know the lovely ladies who may be enjoying this sweet-scented companion to their demi-tasse, but I presume that the law of supply and demand must hold good in tobacco as in everything else. If somebody were not buying ladies' cigarettes, it is reasonably sure that no cigar dealer would order them. Certainly the fact that the tobacconists do the nebulous, enticing little cigaros in wholesale quantities is a rather formidable accessory before the fact.

W. C. Patterson, vice-president of the First National Bank, is a member of the Annandale Country Club, the Sunset Club, the California, the University, the Union League and the Presbyterian Church. Realizing that he must sacrifice something for the sake of time, he allowed himself to be dropped from the Board of Directors of the Associated Charities. This is a world full of sacrifices and Mr. Patterson gave up this hobby with good enough grace, but will continue his monthly contribution to the cause. He joined the Annandale Club for the sake of exercise, took three lessons in golf, was made vice-president and a member of the board of directors, and has taken his exercise ever since by attending board meetings. For mental exercise, he reads Clark's Ten Religions and Elbert Hubbard. This week he is having one round of continual pleasure in the chair of a dentist, who is not painless, and he hopes to be in great condition for the University Club blowout Saturday night. He was one of the first presidents of that organization.

There might have been something doing at the Sunset Club last Friday if George S. Patton had been there to open the discussion on insurgency. Of course, this is a very conservative and unpromising subject, but George is a Democrat and a firebrand, so that even a dead thing might have been given life through the magic of his touch. Under the circumstances, the discussion was led by Senator Bulla, who might have been writing an editorial for a Spineless Newspaper, the way he started the subject by fairly presenting both sides of the case. It is a great deal for a standpatter or an insurgent to admit that there is more than one side to the question. It is the cheerful policy of the Sunset Club to let every man say exactly what he pleases with the understanding that everybody will afterwards forget anything that has been pronounced.

It would not be a very wise thing for even the nearest or dearest friend of J. P. Delaney to ask him about his last Halloween. It seems that Mr. Delaney's children were giving a party that night and that the little people were much annoyed by some of the spooks who were taking in the community. Naturally the youngsters called on their dad to come down and take control of a noisy situation. When Mr. Delaney opened his front door, he saw a boy about 19 years old with his hand on the door-bell. Mr. Delaney handed squarely on the youngster's jaw for a knockout blow, which was a fiercely artistic success. When the boy got up and asked permission to deliver the ice-cream with which he had been sent from the caterers, Mr. Delaney apologized and gave him a dollar. Taking the silver, the boy said that it ought to be $20, and that he guessed he would see a lawyer.

The California is seeing less and less of Sumner P. Hunt these fine days. It is not that Mr. Hunt loves the Californians less, but that he loves walking more. He scorns street cars and automobiles these wonderful golden days and walks to the city from his home every day that it doesn't rain. As it seems never to rain any more, Mr. Hunt is generally walking. His one rival for pedestrian honors is C. D. Cheesman, who covers miles of good country road every day, and who is preparing a poetic essay on the subject of "Autumn in the Aurora." While his paper has not been committed to the public, it is understood to conclude with Warren Cheney's Music of the Pines, which says:

Of the high places, solemnly there goes
In endless undertone the stately rush
Of music—windy melody that grows,
And ebbs and changes in uncertain time,
As if some pensive God tried here apart
Vague snatches of the harmonies divine
Before he played them on the human heart."

FLAXLESS "LINEN."

Fraud Worked on Women Residents of the City's Various Suburbs. Chemical Imitation.

"The Linen Merchant" would make a fine title for a Los Angeles comic opera and if there is anyone left in Los Angeles who has not yet written a play, this subject is respectfully submitted for immediate use.

About ten days ago, a most plausible young man wearing highly polished patent leather shoes, imported worsted trousers of correct stripe and crease, and a gleaming smile, took in nearly every suburb of Los Angeles with an alluring offer of fine imported linen at bargain prices.

After recklessly incriminating himself by carefully explaining that he had smuggled the goods from Canada on board a ship which was at that moment hiding near San Pedro, and which was "cunningly awaiting his stealthy return, he offered those few ladies favored by his call large bolts of linen worth $1 per yard for the ridiculous price of $4 for twenty yards.

Of course, every woman who consented to see him was interested in a minute and proved to Mr. Linen Merchant that she knew all about linen by lifting one dainty finger to the end of her tongue and carrying the moistened digit back to the underside of the cloth. Mr. Smuggler smiled knowingly and the lady thought her wisdom was receiving gracious acknowledgement. In reality, the self-confessed smuggler was only congratulating himself on a very clever chemical invention which enabled him to doctor cheap cotton in such a fashion that it would give the linen effect.

In several homes in different outlying districts of the city the clever scamp has sold large bolts of the stuff. It is simply a very cheap cotton material having a linen finish and is probably worth ten cents a yard.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rivers Drake will reoccupy their Hoover-street home tomorrow, after an absence of more than a year, six months of which time was spent at the Hotel Virginia and the past four weeks at the Alexandria.

THE TRIALS OF A SHEET MUSIC CLERK.

BY J. ALVIN DEAN.

The sheet music clerk balanced a heavy case of music high above his head, and after several attempts succeeded in pushing it into its proper place. As he climbed down the ladder, wiping his perspiring brow, he was greeted by a friend who lolled familiarly over the counter.

"Hey Bill! How's biz?" was the query.

"Still floatin', and then some" came the response. "What's doin' with you?"

"Have you got 'There Haint No Use Workin' if Yer Got the Rocks'?"

"You bet!" The sheet music clerk skipped up the ladder, pulled down a case, and extracted the piece called for. "Anything else?"

"Yes—just a minute—here it is. I want 'Kuh-lers,' or 'Kool-ers,' or 'Keelers,' or what ever you call it, for my sister."

"Oh, you mean 'Kohlers.' You pronounce the 'Koh' like it was a short 'o,' and so you get 'Kuh-lers'."

"Well, let me have it, in book two."

The clerk produced the required book, and the young man drifted out. As the clerk again faced the counter, a large, overly-dressed woman confronted him. "I want the third piano book for my little girl. See that you get it quick, as I want to catch my car."

"Pardon me, but what book is it?"

"Why, the third piano book."

"Yes, madam, but which third piano book? You see, there is a large variety of them."

"But there's only one, I want and I wish you'd hurry as I want to catch my car!"

"Yes, but I must know the author's name, or I can't find it for you."

"Oh bother it! You music people are so aggravating! I'll have to go without the book, or miss the train," out she whisked, in apparent indignation.

A casual observer would have looked for the clerk to show signs of irritation, under the circumstances, but such was not the case. He merely arranged a pile of popular music on sale, whistled a few lines from a late musical comedy selection, and turned with a smile to his next customer. She was a pretty young thing, dressed in a tight fitting blue tailor-made, and carried a large brown music satchel. Stepping briskly up to the counter, she surveyed the clerk with innocent brown eyes, then handed him a crumpled paper upon which was scribbled a couple of lines. Then she waited in mute attention while the clerk attempted to make out the writing. This is what he endeavored to read:

"Ve Ve loc ity exs. Ops 299 by Sh—She—Sher—"

The young man wrinkled his brow into a puzzled frown, and thought with all his might, but he found it necessary to ask a question.

"Would you please tell me who this is by?"

"Why it's down there!" The pretty girl pointed a daintily gloved finger at the scrap of paper.

"Yes, I know—but I can't quite make it out. Is that next letter after 'r' an 'n,' or a 'v'?"

"Really, I don't know," and the fair creature beamed upon him with such fervor that the clerk wished he did.

"Who wrote this?"

"I did!"

"Then, would—would it be too much to ask you to please read it for me? You see, you can do it better."

"You mean Czerny."

"Yes! That's the man! You're so clever to guess it!"

"Not at all! Which book did you want?"

"Book?"

"Yes. There are four books in this opus."

"Why, I'm sure I don't know. Teacher didn't say a word about book."

"Which one did you use last?"

"I really don't remember. Oh, yes! It had a yellow cover on it. Now you'll know!"

"I'm sorry but every Czerny of one whole edition has a yellow cover."

"Then, what'll I do?"

"You'd better take the whole bunch."

"Gracious, no! I haven't money enough, and then I don't want to carry so much, anyway." I'll tell you! I'll go home and find out and then I'll telephone papa to get it for me. He's awfully good about such things. Good day!" She was gone before the clerk scarcely knew it.

The young man behind the counter took a long breath, and resumed his tune. The next moment, a shaggy-haired individual, with a battered violin case, and an evil smelling cigarette made his way to the counter.

"I vant ze musig. I vant ees queek! I moost keth ze car!"

"But—but—" resumed the clerk, gradually regaining his breath. "How do you want it? For violin alone, or for violin with piano accompaniment?"

"Ze feedle wiz ze piana—queek!"

"And the name of it again, please?"

"K-r-a-z-k-o-w-i-a-k-i -- P-a-n-a-s-l-e-w-i-c-z!"

"You'd better write it down, so I can see how it looks!"

"Bah! I haf no time. I moost go!" Out rushed the musician leaving the man behind the counter gazing weakly after him. Before he had time to fully collect his thoughts, a handsome middle-aged matron stepped before him, and in a carefully modulated tone said:

"I want a piece of music, and I can't remember the name of it, but it is simply beautiful!" She gave a sigh in token of her appreciation. "Now, you'll please see if you can't find it for me."

"You're sure you can't remember the name?" ventured the clerk, attempting to gain time.

"No, indeed! If I did, I would tell you. But it's a very pretty piece, only I can't think of the name or the composer."

"Is it vocal or instrumental?"

"Well, I scarcely know—you see, it is for the piano, but I believe it has some words to it."

"Then it's vocal, and—"

"No, I think it's instrumental, and you can scarcely find it with all this help."

"I don't believe that I know what you want."

"What! And you are supposed to know all about music. Just hunt for it!"

"But I have no idea what to look for."

"Well what are you selling most of?"

"I'll show you a lot of good things. Here's a new ballad that's making a big hit at the show over at the Majestic, this week. We've sold a stack of it, already, and it's going better every day."

"All right, here's a fine little piano piece. It's called: 'Sprightly Pranks.' It's awfully pretty, and isn't a bit hard to play."

"I don't think I'd like that. It looks like there were a lot of chords in it, that I'm afraid my daughter couldn't play, though her teacher says she's her most promising pupil."

The weary clerk continued to show his music, but the woman seemed unable to find anything which met her approval. She gathered up her hand bag, and was about to start away, when with a gracious smile she said:

"I'll take one piece of that five cent music, just because you've been so good to wait on me."

The clerk wrapped up the music, took the nickel, and the customer went out, but the former forgot to resume his whistling.

Mr. and Mrs. George Logan are passing a few days at the Lankershim. Logan is a wholesale grocer of Salt Lake City.

J. F. Crowley, a produce merchant of Seattle, is at the Hollenbeck. James W. Abbot, mining engineer and newspaper correspondent of Pioche, is at the same hotel.

Clinton B. Gain, a produce broker of Merced, is at the Maryland. Among the other recent arrivals at the same house are Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hill of Bakersfield, where Hill is in the real estate business.

C. A. Hutton and wife are San Francisco arrivals at the Alexandria. Hutton is president of the Hutton Flour Mills of that place. H. G. McClaren, a banker of Montreal is passing a few days at the same hotel.

Edward E. Eitel is a recent arrival at the Van Nuys. He came down from San Francisco and is here as an official of the Firemen's Fund Insurance Company.

Joseph Francq of Charleroi, Belgium, is making the Angelus his home while in the city. He is a manufacturer of glass, of the firm of Jules Molle & Joseph Francq, and is here on business. He was here five years ago and is astounded at the great advancement of the city.

Ernest Staples of Manila, P. I., has arrived in Los Angeles, and will spend the winter here.

ALL IN THE FAMILY.

It Was Just a Little Row Over Clothes Which Ended in a Unique Arrest.

"I didn't raise no fuss, but I just wanted back the clothes I loaned his mother when she came from the old country," explained Lizzie Stewart of No. 1095 Magnolia street, at the Police Station Tuesday night. She had been arrested by her brother-in-law, Joe Stewart, on a charge of disturbing his peace. As Joe would not fix any bail, Mrs. Stewart was locked up.

There is a Police Court decision, repeatedly affirmed by other police courts, to the effect that it is impossible to disturb the peace of a policeman. Joe Stewart, however, is not a regular policeman, but a private watchman, patrolling a district between Hoover street and Vermont avenue, and Adams and Thirtieth streets.

Joe and John Stewart, the latter an employee of the Llewellyn Iron Works, recently sent to Ireland for their mother and sister. The long trip over the sea, Mrs. Stewart intimated last night, had pretty well exhausted the resources of the two brothers, and when the new comers arrived they were not as well provided for in their wardrobe as they might be.

Mrs. Stewart became tired of having the mother-in-law and sister-in-law wearing out her clothes, and finally she went to Joe's house with John, her 14-year-old son, and asked that the garments be returned to her. A dispute arose and Joe, by virtue of his authority, arrested his sister-in-law.

Mrs. Stewart has five children, the youngest, Margaret, being six years of age.

THEIR ASSETS SMALL.

I. H. Johnson, who gives his business as an agent, filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court, yesterday. He gives his liabilities as $7796.54, with $150 assets.

Blake Russell, a teamster, who alleges that he owes $926 for doctors' and grocers' bills, and has only $30.50 with which to liquidate, yesterday also filed a petition in bankruptcy.

FACTS FEATURE ANCIES FOR WON By Olive

DAILY BEAUTY HINT: steady, that nothing which can complexion than do carrots. said to act favorably upon the

One of the large stores which tended having its toy opening on urday last, was so stormed by to be purchasers that by four people had to be barred from and the sales commenced at Fr You see, it was an after-Thanksgiving school-holiday and the little ones were shopping with mother and when they say the toys they determined to them right then—and they got t It was rather laughable—for the vertising manager of the store, one of the proprietors were forced to acting as salespeople and their they did not know much about part of the business.

It seems as though the toys never so attractive as this year have noticed the joy of children the toboggan slides in one departm Does the coasting instinct, suppres by our lack of snow, break forth redoubled force when these toys are discovered? The children want stay and slide all day.

In one big store, I noticed the temadic arrangement of all toys, hobbies of every variety were at counter, the farm machinery and f animals at another, the "moo" c tures at still another. There was whole department of Teddy bears a booth filled with glittering things the Christmas tree. Dolls, of cours all kinds and sizes. Ballroom and to suit the most veritable young la the magnate, and electrical toys every variety.

At one store I observed the educa taste displayed in the choice of furniture. The fumy-greeny and the the modern brass bedsteads were good material and tasteful in ornamentation. This seems right—as far as possible inculcate a love of artistic and the excellent at an early age. At this place I also noticed choice for holding toys when not in They were decorated in quaint Dutch figures in colors and were mounted upon shallow trucks so that the toys of toys may be easily wheeled from room to room, or under. This is a timeliness taught and at the same time there is fun and prettiness.

For the boy who loves the gnome and its products there are complete stamp mills, showing in miniature just the process of treating the ore as it comes from the mine. There is a stationary engine which works by means of a tiny dynamo and which may be attached to the other toys to make them work.

Aviation is having its day in toyland, too. Attached to the electric light plug, the biplane or the monoplane swings around and around the room, with no fear of death to its occupants.

I noticed a complete garage, with several kinds of automobiles, perfect although lilliputian, and there are, of course, larger autos for real use.

So perfect and so interesting are many of the toys, that they would do for Christmas gifts for grown-ups, and I sometimes wonder if the children will not be obliged to wait their turn until father has done acquainting himself with their presents, on Christmas morning.

A Rich Gift.

If I were a millionaire, I would make some one a present of that superb grand piano, in its case of Circassian walnut—you have doubtless noticed it in a Broadway window. It is richly carved in artistic designs suggestive of the classical appreciation of music, and its tones—which I had the privilege of hearing—are as rich as is the ornamentation.

There is also an upright, almost as beautiful. A gift such as this would make Christmas all the year in one's home.

At the same place I observed a novelty in the way of a library table, which contains a phonograph so enclosed as to be a complete surprise when music begins to issue forth from the handsome piece of furniture. What a treasure for the apartment home, where everything which can masquerade as something else confers an air of fin the way of added room. If any one in the Arabian Nights had told of a table which gave forth music, it would have seemed like a part of the magic of the enchanting tales, but here it is—a fact in mahogany, oak and walnut.

Violet Insurance.

"There," said Elizabeth, "I feel safer, in two ways." She had just finished fastening on a great bunch of fresh violets, and as I gave an inquiring glance, she explained. The stems were enclosed in a rubber lined corsage caps, covered with a bit of violet silk—this her own device; and the flowers were fastened to her coat by means of one of the new violet pins. It is a strong pin, with the flat end so bowed as to enfold the stems of the flowers, thus holding them firmly in place without crushing. "I so dislike to have flowers drop on the street," said Elizabeth, "not half so much because of the loss of the flowers as that I hate to have them trampled under feet. This pin cost little and is insurance against the violation of my love of flowers while the rubber stem-case insures my gown against dampness."

To Eat.

Have you ever tasted peppers stuffed with oysters? If not, you have in store a treat, if you are fond of these delicacies. Cut away the stem end of the large peppers and remove the seeds. Chop one pepper with ½ onion and saute these until well browned. Parboil in their own juice for five minutes 1 pint of oysters—you may use the best of canned oysters. Pour over three cups of bread crumbs enough oyster liquor to moisten, season with pepper and salt and mix in the sauted pepper and onion. Fill peppers with this mixture, inserting three oysters for each pepper. Sprinkle the top with bread crumbs which have been moistened with melted butter and bake in a moderate oven until brown.

For the Eastern Housewife.

I noticed in a Broadway bookstore a little booklet which I think would be a the eastern housekeeper.

It gives 101 ways of cooking and using the pepper; and the book is appropriately bound in scarlet, suggestive of the popular southwestern delicacy. Few eastern cooks have learned the various uses of the pepper and its introduction would doubtless be appreciated.

DAILY BEAUTY HINT: It is said by those who make such things a study, that nothing which can be eaten has a better influence upon the complexion than do carrots. Some chemical property in the vegetables is said to act favorably upon the tissues and upon the blood.

One of the large stores which had intended having its toy opening on Saturday last, was so stormed by would-be purchasers that a force of salespeople had to be hurriedly summoned and the sales commenced on Friday. You see, it was an after-Thanksgiving school-holiday and the little ones went shopping with mother and when they saw the toys they determined to have them right then—and they got them. For the Small Boy.

Sweater suits for the small boy seem to be a popular gift, and no wonder for the tots look very cunning in these warm clothes. One house entirely sold out and was obliged to order by wire and have the suits sent be express, so urgent was the call for them. They come put up in pretty boxes containing the sweater, footed trousers and caps. There are several colors, but the white and scarlet are most sought.

Christmas Shopping for Men.

It must have been a woman who devised the coupon system of present-giving for men's use. Men look so helpless when floundering around in a dry goods store trying to solve the gift problem that one can imagine what a boon is the suggestion that they purchase the glove coupon, or the dress coupon, thus placing upon the recipient all responsibility of selection. Another coupon gift, now this se[illegible] the plume and its accompanying [illegible] for placing it upon the hat. These come put up by a Broadway milliner in a handsome gift box and the recipient of the coupon has but to select the color preferred.

Household Hints.

Ink stains on handkerchiefs, etc., may be soaked out in milk, but the sooner they are dealt with the more easily will they be removed.

The best way to peel onions is to hold them under water during the operation. Then cut up a raw potato to remove the odor from the hands.

A pinch of soda added to the boiling water in which cabbage or cauliflower is cooked improves the flavor and prevents much of the offensive odor.

For easy boot-cleaning brush the boots free from dust; then with a bit of rag rub a little glycerine well into the leather. Let nearly dry; then rub with a soft brush.

By pouring a little olive oil over a soft linen cloth and gently rubbing over the surface of mahogany furniture, the dust and white color caused by dampness will be removed.

When giving castor oil take a small tumbler and squeeze into it a tablespoonful of orange juice; next pour in the oil and add more juice. The juice will inclose the oil, and it can be swallowed without tasting.

Fashion's Reflections.

One of the new shapes in muffs is rather narrow and very deep and is a hand bag as well as a muff. I saw a very striking one in black lynx edged with a band of white fox and finished at the lower end with a huge bow of black satin ribbon, so arranged that the ribbon ends formed a tassel.

A striking combination recently noticed in a gown was black voile made over a broken check of black and white in fine twilled goods. There were slight touches of emerald green at neck, sleeves and waist line and the same color peeped out between the fastenings of the bodice in front, in the form of a tiny shirt frill. With this was worn a black French felt hat, banded with narrow pipings of the black and white edged with green, and a black ostrich plume in cockade style, interspered with strands of green.

MRS. KRAUSS IS DEAD.

Wife of Distinguished Musician Succumbs After Long Battle With Illness.

Mrs. Arnold Krauss, wife of the concertmaster of the symphony orchestra, who is also a musical pioneer here and one of the best-known artistic figures of the West, died at her home, No. 841 West Eighteenth street, Monday evening.

The funeral services will be held at the Krauss residence this afternoon, and it is expected that the attendance will consist of intimate friends. Rev. Dr. Hugh K. Walker will be the presiding clergyman, and the ceremonies will be brief and exceedingly simple. The body will be cremated at Rosedale.

Mrs. Krauss was practically shut off from the world for the last two years of her life, being an invalid. Not until six weeks ago, however, did her family fear the early termination of her life-and-death struggle.

One daughter, Miss Lillian Krauss, a beautiful girl of 17 years, is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Krauss.

The matrimonial affairs of the Krauss household always had a tinge of blissful romance, beginning with the day, nearly nineteen years ago when Mr. Krauss, then a music student in Paris, met a handsome Belgian girl, from Brussels, who was destined to become his wife.

The late Mrs. Krauss was nearly 43 years of age.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY?

Chinese Declares His Innocence and Implicates Countrymen in the Smuggling Plot.

Although denying that he has any connection with the international smuggling ring which the United States authorities have brought to light, Wong Chin Doc, who is alleged to be one of the leaders, has divulged to local Federal officers information which may lead to important arrests.

The two Mexicans who pleaded guilty Tuesday to charges of having been in the conspiracy were taken before Wong in the office of Assistant United States Dist.-Atty. Stewart, yesterday. Through an interpreter they declared he was the man who had received contrabands from them at Riverside.

Wong assured the officers that he was a victim of mistaken identity and that a man who resembled him was the real conspirator. He showed indications of being badly frightened. He remained silent for a short time, apparently trying to thing of a means of escape.

To the surprise of the authorities, he gave them the names of Chinese who, he declared, were connected with the plot. It was his apparent intention to stir up trouble for some of his countrymen in the possible hope that he might be passed by in the quest for bigger game. The grand jury returned three indictments against Wong and he is now arranging for an attorney to represent him.

The investigation of the coolie smuggling band is only partially completed and there are daily developments which indicate the authorities will succeed in capturing the majority of the persons implicated in this far-reaching conspiracy.

ANARCHISTS GET NO AID.

Salvation Army Refuses Them Help in Fresno.

Officer Pronounces Their Utterances Unpatriotic.

District Attorney Takes Up Food Trust Matter.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

FRESNO, Nov. 30.—The war between the Industrial Workers of the World and the police department of Fresno is again on. The workers are shrieking out imprecations against the police force and Chief of Police William Shaw has declared that he will tolerate no defiance of the city's ordinances.

All permits to the agitators for speaking on one side of the courthouse square, which were issued as a compromise two weeks ago, have been revoked. Last night, fifteen of the agitators were arrested as vagrants on attempting to speak, and several more are now in jail on various charges.

The Salvation Army here has refused aid to the members of the anarchistic organization. A majority of the industrialists are badly clothed, having arrived in this city from Spokane and other points on brakebeams, leaving their trunks behind. Yesterday several of them applied to the Army for donations of old clothing, but were refused. The captain of the religious organization afterward stated that he did not approve the sentiments uttered in the public meetings, the utterances being unpatriotic and "shocking," and that there are more worthy subjects for the charity of the Army.

AFTER FOOD TRUSTS.

Dist.-Atty. Church has actively taken up the crusade against the local food "trusts," and declares that he will cooperate with the grand jury in gathering evidence with a view to indictments under the Cartwright anti-trust law.

"Judge Austin and I have had several conferences concerning the grocery trust," said the District Attorney last night, "and the instructions to the grand jury are the result. It is my desire that this matter be sifted to the bottom and if there is anything unlawful going on among the business men of Fresno, the people can be assured that prosecution will follow."

Charges of combinations to restrain trade have been made against the grocers, the green goods men and the butchers. The foreman of the grand jury is a furniture merchant.

BAD FOR CATTLE.

Considerable anxiety is expressed by cattlemen over the feed situation in this county. It is reported that many cattle are dying in the foothills on account of the shortage among the small owners who cannot move their animals to pasturage in the plains. The rains have washed out the dry feed, while the cold weather has kept back the new crop.

ESTABLISHES A RECORD.

San Joaquin Valley Rancher Travels Eight Thousand Miles in an Automobile With Son.

DAUNT, Nov. 29.—H. D. Radleff, a wealthy orange grower of the upper Tule, has returned from what he claims, and with probable justice, is the most economical auto tour on record, having covered an eight thousand mile journey with a total expense of $1190.

Mr. Radleff moved here with his family from the East two years ago, taking up his residence in the mountains upon the advice of his physicians who held out hope that the mountain climate would be of benefit to his wife, who was a confirmed invalid. Mrs. Radleff, in spite of skilled nursing and medical attendance, failed rapidly and died early in July.

Overcome with grief Mr. Radleff and his young son started with their auto July 15, headed, to use Mr. Radleff's own words "for the land of God-knows-where." With a twenty horsepower touring car they went north as far as Seattle, then turning east followed the line of the Northern Pacific railroad through Montana, then turned south through Wyoming, to Nebraska and through Iowa and Illinois to Chicago. Here they flipped a coin to decide whether to continue eastward or change their course to the south, with the final decision to turn south. Following the Mississippi they toured to New Orleans, where they turned again to the west. Practically following the southern Pacific southern route, they arrived in Tucson, Arizona, in time to participate in the Tucson-Los Angeles road race. Mr. Radleff in commenting upon his journey said that the worst roads in the world are those on that portion of his journey and that hereafter when he is tempted to complain of the highways in California, he will content himself with a thought of Arizona.

When the party arrived at the home garage in Porterville their odometer showed that the total length of their journey, which had occupied them more than six months, was 8129 miles.

Quite the most remarkable thing about the trip was the fact that the car returned with the same set of tires as that with which the machine left home and the largest single repair bill paid on the journey was $1.30. Figuring hotel bills along the road, oil, gasoline and repairs, the total cost of the journey was only $1129.

Mr. Radleff is now at work upon a little book descriptive of his journey and has received a flattering offer for the work when it is completed, from the makers of the machine which made such a remarkable record for economy.

INVESTS IN RANCH.

Los Angeles Man Buys Dairy in Tulare and Prepares to Increase the Stock.

TULARE, Nov. 30.—More Los Angeles capital flowed into the Tulare district through the sale yesterday of what is known generally as the "Chicago" ranch to I. H. Johnson, a retired lawyer of the Southern metropolis. This is considered one of the best dairy ranches of this section and was formerly the property of E. E. Morris, of Santa Ana. It is stated that the price paid for the quarter section of alfalfa lands, with the farming implements upon the place and the various improvements, aggregated $50,000.

Mr. Johnson expects to make his home on his new place at least during the fall and spring seasons, and will purchase 150 head of pure bred dairy cows with a view to making a model dairy.

Ailments of Men Happily Overcome

Successfully Tried by Many.

Undoubtedly the following prescription will work wonders for that great class of men who, through dissipation of their natural strength, find themselves in their "second childhood" long before the three score and ten allotted to life's pleasures and enjoyments are reached.

It is presumed to be infallible, and highly efficient in quickly restoring in "nervous exhaustion," weak vitality, melancholia and the functions.

First get 50 cents' worth of compound fluid balmwort in a 1-ounce package, and 2 ounces syrup sarsaparilla compound; take home, mix and let stand two hours; then get ½ ounce compound essence cardini and 1 ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom). Mix all in a 6 or 8-ounce bottle, shake well, and take 1 teaspoonful after each meal and 1 when retiring followed by a drink of water.

By mixing it at home no man need be the wiser as to another's shortcomings, and expensive fees are avoided.

Lack of poise and equilibrium in men is a constant source of embarrassment even when the public least suspects it. For the benefit of those who want a restoration to full, bounding health, and all the happiness accompanying it, the above home treatment is given. It contains no opiates or habit-forming drugs whatever. Mix it at home and no one will be the wiser as to your affliction.

FINE FEATHERS TO BE PLUCKED.

"Dude Prisoner" Leaves Jail for State Prison.

Man Who Mistreated Girl Goes to Penitentiary.

Gray-Haired Mother Stays by Him to Last.

The County Jail lost its "dude prisoner" last evening when Deputy Sheriff Fullaway left with O. F. Babcock to place him in San Quentin to serve a ten-year term of imprisonment.

Babcock's foppishness has distinguished him from the other prisoners since the time he was taken in custody and he did not lose a bit of it in nearly a year of confinement.

As he stepped out of the iron doors, to go to the train, his dress was more appropriate for an afternoon tea than for a trip to a place where his clothes will be changed for a felon's stripes.

The prisoner was taken in custody more than a year ago on a charge of having mistreated Mecca Byler, a candy girl employed in a Broadway confectionery store.

He is related to persons of high standing in this city and who furnished bonds for his release. In a short time they gave him up to the authorities and he has been in jail since.

He met the girl, who was the principal witness against him, while a customer at the soda fountain where she was employed. He testified that he called at the place daily as his health required a malted milk every morning.

The details of the affair were of a nature which would not bear repetition. The jury returned a verdict of guilty on March 9. Nine days later he was sentenced. His case was taken up on appeal and the decision was recently affirmed by the District Court of Appeals.

WILL BE LITTLE MISSED.

There were none of the prisoners who were sorry to say good-bye to him as he was taken away last night. They could overlook his offense, but they could not forgive him for his effeminate desire to be at all times "dressed up."

Good clothes seemed to be a mania with him. He always appeared as if he had just come from colonge bath. He was physically too clean in a jail where cleanliness is a required virtue.

He was too busy brushing spots from his clothes and seeing that his trousers fell in the proper crease to permit the jail life to pall on him.

The jail fare was too coarse for his delicate system and he has paid regular board in order that he might be furnished with delicacies.

He insisted that he should travel in "style," even though on the way to the penitentiary where his broadcloths will be taken from him.

He expressed his willingness to pay the extra charges of having a stateroom on the "Owl," and the Sheriff consented to the arrangement.

MOTHER HOLDS RESPECT.

While the prisoner won no sympathy in the predicament to which his foolishness brought him, there was one interested in his case who gained much respect from jail attaches. This person was his gray-haired mother.

Her love was too great to be extinguished by the cloud which its object brought upon her good name. She has visited him almost daily in the last few months, carrying him nicknacks which he craved more than liberty, itself.

She provided him with the funds which were used in fighting his case in the higher court, but they were wasted as the story which the defendant told on the witness stand would have convicted him without any additional evidence being produced.

She was granted unusual privileges in visiting him, because of the sympathy for her and not because there was any desire to confer favors on the prisoner.

Babcock will long be remembered in the County Jail as the "dude prisoner."

HE IS TAKEN IN.

Spokane Man Loses Faith in Plausible Stranger, Who Offers Fine Position in This City.

After searching for several days and failing to find the Sunburst Mining and Prospecting Company, John McLaughlin, of Spokane, reported to the police yesterday afternoon that he did no believe the concern existed, and asked that T. Lackey, who he believed to be in the city, be taken into custody.

According to McLaughlin's story he left a good position in Spokane to take a better one with the "Sunburst" company, and that the transfer was brought about by his paying Lackey $5, whom he met in that city. He accompanied him to Los Angeles but lost track of his friend here. He has since devoted his time looking for the offices, also for Lackey.

MILLER'S SWINDLE.

explanation, was charged $7.50 for the honor conferred, and he in turn was authorized to "initiate" other agents. Miller alleges that $5 of this amount was forwarded to the Chicago office, while the remaining $2.50 was the fee of the agent making the "initiation."

McNamara declares, however, that Miller set a new price for the initiation of agents fixing the figure at $5. It is also held that he asked some of his most prosperous clients $25. It is not known how many clients were willing to exchange good money for the agency of such an enterprising concern.

EXPLAINS METHOD.

In explaining the methods and merits of the Globe concern to his near-agents Miller laid stress on the fact that he was out to "bust" the grocery and foodstuff trusts. Cheap prices of staples, according to the agent, was the club that would bring down the price of bacon. Miller stated that his agents would be able, after paying the initiation fee, to sell fine soap to patrons at the rate of five bars for 12 cents. Five boxes of biscuits would also be jobbed at 12 cents, and other foodstuffs would receive a similar "jar" in prices.

"We will be the most popular concern in the world," Miller is quoted by his near-patrons as saying. "Just think of it! Five cakes of soap at less than ten cents, when they sell at ten cents a cake now. And what made soap so dear—why the trusts. We will break the trusts. Everyone of them. That's the business we're in. Trust busters—that's the slogan of our company."

WILLING TO QUIT.

According to the police, Miller has a family residing in this city, but the address could not be learned. When taken to police headquarters yesterday, he begged to be released, stating that he would close up his business and even leave the city if his request were granted.

Unless further evidence is secured the man will not be prosecuted, state the police.

One of those who assert that they came near being victimized by Miller made the following statement yesterday:

"In answer to an advertisement which appeared in one of the morning papers asking for six men and promising good salary and chance for promotion, I went to the address given, room 111, Henne building. The room was empty except for a desk, a chair and a few samples of different kinds of groceries. The two men, who claimed to be handling these from a large commission house in Chicago, told me that they wanted men to act as agents for them in fighting what they called the 'trusts' controlling the staples in groceries. They said that each man who worked for them would be required to make a deposit of $25 to cover the value of the goods supplied him, though I overheard them tell another applicant that the deposit was $20. They asked me to sign a statement which, however, they declined to allow me to read until I had agreed to make the deposit. As I understood them, the agents were to receive quantities of staple groceries from their Chicago house and sell them at ridiculously low prices, the 'salary' being a part of the money received. As one example of what they called 'fighting the trust,' they said that they expected to sell soap at the rate of five cakes for twelve cents, biscuit at five boxes for twelve cents and so on. The men were poorly dressed, refused to give their names and, in general created such an impression upon me that I told them that they could not get me to subscribe to such a swindle. I left and went to Secretary Zeehandelaar, of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, informing him of the matter. He advised me to report to the police, which I did."

A MEETING POINT.

CLIMBING TO SEE WHERE THE ARK CAME TO LAND

Noah and the Animals Must Have Had a Desolate Time if the Top of Mount Ararat at the Flood Was Anything Like What It Is Now—Higher Than Mt. Blanc and Until Lately Supposed to Be Occupied by Evil Spirits Intent on Keeping Invaders Out.

Where Noah Came to Earth.

The top of Mount Ararat. The sticks on the left of the photo are the remains of a hut erected by a party of Russian scientists eight years ago.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 14.—"Ararat! And did you see the Ark?"

Yes, and here is a photograph of it, obtained at bitter cost.

Ararat is not a mountain that is climbed every day, or every year. Seventeen ascents have been recorded and there is no reason to suppose that any have escaped notice. After the Hon. James Bryce, unaccompanied, made his remarkable ascent in 1876, of which he has written in a most entertaining book, he was told by everyone whom he met in the vicinity of the mountain that the top had never been reached, and what was more that it never could be. Jinns and fiends and giants had prevented the rascally Koords from even attempting to scale the terrible mountain, and, according to the indigenous Armenians, a jealous God had not, since the famous "bump," allowed mortal man to trespass on the sacred heights. Had not St. Hagop tried again and again to reach the summit in order to silence the sceptics about the Ark? But he found himself each morning, on waking, quietly deposited at the base whence he started. Finally an angel presented him with a piece of the Ark for his pains, but told him to cease his attempts to reach the forbidden ground. That was in the fourth century of our era but the piece of the Ark is still to be seen at the monastery of Etchmiadsin where dwells the catholicos of the Armenian church.

That Russians or a stray, lone Englishman had really reached the top of Ararat was not to be thought of.

Times have changed in the last thirty years even at the base of Ararat; the railroad now goes skimming along the great waste of the Garden of Eden; the catholicos or head of the Armenian church, who dwells in glorious sight of the snow-domed mountain, is an enlightened man (who presses electric buttons, turns switches, and give audience near a table covered with Tangierous hospitality of the Russian official of the place made this as slight an inconvenience as possible; indeed one of the pleasant associations of the trip is the new idea received of the courtesy and good entertainment of the Russians.

From Kamarloo the party set out early in the morning, fording the ancient Araxes River and driving a few miles to the village of Aralykh. Here two hours were consumed in making up the cavalcade for traversing the blazing plain. Cossack horsemen formed the advance and rear, and there were six pack horses. The plain is a desert of sand and ashes—prehistorically Mt. Ararat was a volcano. Camelthorn and a few other desert shrubs dot the waste. The heat is suffocating; the sand, the stones, the air, everything is scorching; and so was everybody on arriving at Takeltoo, a military post at the base of the mountain.

THE KOORDS.

The following day was consumed in making preparations for the ascent and in visiting the Koordish encampments in the vicinity. These Koords have led a nomadic existence for centuries, planting their tents on the mountain in the summer, descending into the plain for the winter. They are half-savages; their religion is a poor kind of Mohammedanism, their language a kind of Turkish. They are a dirty, pitiless, fierce and at the same time cowardly lot. Since such people had to be the "guards" of the party and the porters of supplies to the night encampment higher up the mountain, their chief, Mehmed Beg, was invited to dinner. He was an exception to his fellows, a man of superb build, dressed in the long Georgian coat with tubes for cartridges at the breast, and a tall fur bonnet. For generations his family had ruled over the wandering tribes of Ararat. Then came the Russians, who left the chieftainship in the same family but exacted a strict loyalty.

The departure for the morrow, August 11, was set at 8 o'clock. The Koords arrived duly, but immediately foot fly-paper from a certain Michigan town;) and the Koords, though they will not venture their worthless hides more than two miles high, are willing to admit that other people have braved the jinns for the third mile and the still more difficult surplus.

"Long, Flowing Lines."

WAY UP.

Mt. Ararat is 17,000 feet high. Unlike its lower relative, Mt. Blanc, it rises out of a plain, the ex-Garden of Eden of course, 2700 feet above sea-level. A dry enough statement, but what a picture it could tell if only thoughts of heights could give sublime effects! Take the mountain at twilight time, all purple except for the cold white of the snow dome, with a crescent moon in the yet blue sky. Then do not think of crags and points and rough masses heaped up; that is not Ararat. But think of long flowing lines that lift themselves along the sky from north and south to form two peaks, Little Ararat and Big Ararat.

The peaks are seven miles apart, the lesser rising but to 13,000 feet, a pyramid of volcanic material that seems a mole hill in comparison to the vast bulk of the greater structure. The top of Little Ararat just escapes being covered perpetually with snow, for in the dry atmosphere of Armenia snow remains the year round only on the last three of four thousand feet of Big Ararat.

We were a party of five that left Constantinople, camping on the deck of an Austrian Lloyd steamer for Batoum. It was a voyage of five days because of the stops at various black sea ports, as Kerassund, whence Lucullus first brought cherries and hence the name for them; Samsoun, which sends several million pounds of tobacco leaf to America yearly; Trebizond, where Xenophon encamped after seeing "The Sea! The Sea!" and where in the middle ages flourished a rich Byzantine court.

From Batoum, Mt. Ararat is thirty hours distant by the comfortable, cinderless and, except for a strong whiff of kerosene now and then, smokeless Russian trains. At Tiflis, where the cholera was giving the outside world some anxiety, though the city seemed unconcerned enough, we added three more to our party: a Russian, a German and an Englishman. We already represented Scotland, Switzerland and America. The Swiss was an Alpinist of repute who had climbed most of the difficult peaks of his fatherland.

ONE TRAIN A DAY.

There is only one train a day from Tiflis to the Persian border, and that drops you before the journey's end at the nearest point for Ararat about nightfall. The mountain is still eighteen miles away across the plain, and it is necessary to sleep in the fever-ridden Tartar village of Kamarloo. The general began disputing about the weight of the packages and refused to carry anything over twelve or thirteen pounds. It was necessary to repack several of the bundles. This arranged, the beggars squabbled to see who should get the lightest packages. Finally, towards 8 o'clock, the march began. But at the end of ten minutes the Koords dropped their burdens, threw off their blankets, and lay down for a chatter and smoke. A quarter of an hour further on, there was a brook. Bang! Down went the bundles, off came the blankets, and then the noise and cigarettes again. Never can you hear in civilized lands such a provoking sound as that of these chattering Koords. This monotonous business went on throughout the day, or rather until the middle of the afternoon, when, at a height of 11,500 feet, the Koords flung themselves down on a grassy spot and refused to go farther until the morning. There was nothing to do but accept the decision of these amiable friends. Marching orders were given for sunrise.

VENUS CAME OUT.

At 3 o'clock on the morning of Friday, August 12, Venus came out of the eastern horizon like a sun. It was time for the camp to be stirring. At 4:30 the Swiss was waiting, his pack on his shoulders, alpenstock in hand; at 6 o'clock he was still waiting. Then he started off with the Scotchman and an American. At 9:30 they had reached a height of 13,000 feet. The weather was superb. It was the day for a record, and setting aside thoughts of a second night's encampment with the rest of the party and the Koords, it was decided to make for the summit.

The ascent was by the southern ridge of rocks. Every few rods it became necessary to lie down in order to regain breath. It was not the legs, but the lungs trying in vain to get enough air, that were tired; the heart beat with rapid, shattering strokes; the head was seized with dizziness whenever one looked up to search the way. Higher, always higher, the ascent continued by little stages, the breathing becoming more and more difficult, the body more exhausted. At length the rocky ridge was achieved and there succeeded a ridge of detritus composed of sulphurous dust. It looked easy to surmount. And then the top! But painful moments were reserved in the sulphur dust. So inconsistent it was that one could not take three steps without sliding, staggering, falling. It required an hour and a half to cover 500 feet. Strength was giving out; it was already 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Finally, to make an end of it the Swiss left this difficult ground to take to the ice, and without cutting steps or paying attention to the anxious calls of his companions, rushed sixty feet up the glare surface; the slope ceased; it was the summit! A few seconds sat on the back and fatigue vanished. Remarkable good fortune gave a cloudless and misless atmosphere on the mountain, but the plain, nearly three miles below, was dimmed by a surface haze. Far, too far off and too insignificant, were the other mountains of Armenia. The wind blew in terrible squalls; it was necessary to shout at the top of one's voice to make a word heard. The cold numbed one's fingers and blanched the lips. Half an hour of this was enough, and there was still the descent to reckon with.

WHAT A DESCENT!

But once below the glare ice, what a descent was that!—a glissade of 4000 feet in height, which accomplished in a few minutes what in ascent had taken five painful hours. The cautious Scot had not made provision for this kind of wear and tear, and at the end of the slide he found the legs of his trousers full of snow. On examining more in detail he discovered that nothing remained of the seat of his breeches.

At the end of the glissade there was still five hours of hard tramping the last two of which were in the feeble light of a six-days' moon; then the enthusiastic welcome at the encampment of Sardar Bulakh. The return that night had not been dreamed of; the trip was indeed a record.

"But what about that fine picture of Noah's Ark?" you will ask.

Noah's Ark? I did not say Noah's Ark. I only said "the Ark." I took that picture myself in Tabriz, Persia, on the very day that my three companions reached the top of Ararat. The "bitter cost" of the picture was an injured knee that prevented me from attempting the ascent of the mountain. But the picture is really the Ark. That is the name the Persians give to their citadels.

The only thing I would say about Noah and his cargo of man and beast is that they must have got a mighty cold reception if they landed on the summit of Big Ararat. But was that any excuse for Noah's peculiar conduct at the base of the mountain? You can make a pilgrimage to that spot "to this day."

RAILWAY WORLD.

During the past twenty-one years, the railway mileage of the United States has increased 52.7 per cent., according to President Howard Elliott of the Northern Pacific. The passengers carried one mile have increased 154.9 per cent. in number. The tons of freight carried one mile have increased 224.3 per cent. and the number of employees 116.2 per cent., the taxes on railroad properties have meantime increased 230.8 per cent.; he also brought out the fact that the passenger trains of all the railroads in the country, earned on an average for the year ended June 30, 1908, only $1.27 per train mile, while the average cost per train mile—no allowance being made for taxes—was $1.47; in other words, the freight traffic has to earn its own cost and that of the passenger in part.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, will hereafter divide its midnight express trains between New York and Boston into two sections. The second section will have no cars but sleeping cars, and one of these will be "de luxe;" that is to say, the sleeping room will have brass bedsteads, and the fare for such a room will be $12 for one passenger, or $16.75 for two passengers. The transportation fare is $4.75 for each passenger, from which it appears that the cost of the room is $7.25.

A corporation has been formed in New Jersey for the operation of a monorail system of cars from Philadelphia to Atlantic City and Cape way. It is understood that the proposed line will be later extended northward to New York and westward to Washington, through Baltimore. The monorail car was invented by a Baltimore man, Howard H. Tunis. At present a line of single-track cars is in operation in New York City and runs through Pelham Park for two or three miles.

Harrington Emerson, consulting engineer of the Santa Fe road from 1904 to 1907, says that during that time scientific management in the machine shops resulted in large savings. The delay on engines in the shops was reduced more than half, and the engine repair bill was reduced in one year between $1,200,000 and $1,700,000. He believes there can be large savings on all the railroads except in the traffic department where present efficiency is very high. In the matter of fuel, he says a pound of water should be converted into steam by the consumption of one-fifth of a pound of coal. The highest efficiency found anywhere was one pound of water to a pound of coal, while in general practice the railroads consume anywhere from seven to nine pounds of coal to transform a pound of water into steam. With railroads, he said, the fuel bill was the largest item of expense. He showed how the cost of maintaining locomotives had been reduced 50 per cent. on the Santa Fe system, and he thought the cost should still further be reduced 33 per cent. Returning to the coal item, Mr. Emerson spoke of the St. Paul as being the most efficient road in the country in the consumption of fuel, having established a record of 175 pounds per thousand pounds of freight per mile. The average for the whole country is 261 pounds.

In total length of single track the West Jersey and Seaport line leads among the continuous current, electrified steam railroad systems, with a total length of 150 miles of single track, says the Scientific American. Then follow the New York Central, 132 miles; the Long Island, 125 miles; the Pennsylvania, 75 miles; the Metropolitan Railway, London, 67 miles, and the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway, England, 60 miles of single track. The electrification of subways and elevated systems in America has reached a total of 426 miles. The longest single system is that of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company of New York, which has 156 miles. Then follow the Chicago elevated systems, with 113 miles; the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, 71 miles; Boston elevated, 19 miles; Philadelphia Rapid Transit, 11 miles, and the Hudson and Manhattan, 12 miles.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The old cry against the present method of handling grapegrowers in California was heard again yesterday morning when a large shipment of this fruit was received from San Francisco. The local dealers were forced to go through the long process of calling up the inspectors, having them come down and look over the fruit, unpack their stock, fumigate and repack. The time consumed is worth more than the fruit itself and unless some change is made in the system, Los Angeles people will have a hard time in obtaining the succulent fruit from the Hawaiian Islands. The contention is made that such a fruit should be fumigated upon arrival in San Francisco, or still better on arrival in Honolulu from from which port shipments are made. The planes have a peculiar odor, which the fruit experts claim may be injurious to orange and lemon trees. When the fruit is received and handled in San Francisco, it is merely looked over and without more ado shipped to Los Angeles. The dealers claim that there is as much danger of the fruit being dangerous on account of the scale in the shipment down as it is on standing around the markets. The pineapples received will sell at 5 cents per pound. Outside of the supposed scale they are in very excellent condition.

Another decline in eggs was reported. Candied are down to 43 cents and case count were listed at 39 cents although most sales of this stock were made at 40 cents on the street. The San Francisco market was reported down to 41 cents and this with the slight increase in arrivals and the smaller demand from retailers occasioned the many small egg raisers who are selling individual dealers' stock form the causes for the lower prices. Arrivals yesterday were 134 cases.

Butter receipts were 11,350 pounds. This continued light arrival of butter is causing steadiness in the market. Sales of the commodity were light.

Cheese was rather quiet in trading. Arrivals of foreign cheese have been of good size during the week and there has been a lot of trading in fancy varieties. Swiss and Northern from were the best traders in the ordinary varieties. Receipts were 840 pounds.

Poultry arrivals were 1118 sacks. Reports from Longon announced a 4 cent advance on spots in 4-5 lots, offering to the heavy buying list of San Francisco operators who are in the field. That means a $1.70 market on Longons here until another advance is announced. Sales of the product were not reported yesterday.

Onion receipts were 220 sacks. The call was fair and prices were firm with possibilities of an advance. Bean receipts were only 10 sacks. The market on the whole was good. Sweet potato arrivals were 467 sacks. There was a break in these on account of the bigger receipts.

Apple arrivals were 3767 boxes. The best seller of the morning ranged between the Winesap and the Spitzenberg. Grapes were steady. Peaches are in little call and are moving very slowly. Pears are going up and the stock in storage is fast diminishing.

A decline of nearly 1 cent was reported on live hogs, the market on heavies, running over 230 pounds, being quoted at 7½ and on lighter weights an average of 8 cents. Veal was also quoted down ½ cent.

VIOLENT BREAK IN STOCK LIST.

ACTIVE SHARES SHOW LOSSES OF POINT OR MORE.

Vague Belief That Recent Bull Movement Has Gone Stale Aids in Downward Trend—Month's Output of New Securities Far Exceeds Same Month Year Ago.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Prices broke with some violence in today's stock market, the active list registering losses that ranged from 1 to 3½ points. No explanation attended the decline other than the rather vague bullish belief that the recent bull movement had gone stale from lack of outside encouragement. By way of supplementary rumor it was thought in many quarters that some open readjustment in steel and iron prices would be soon announced. Apropos of general financial conditions, it is interesting to note that the month's output of new securities aggregated $131,000,000 or more than $27,000,000 in excess of November, 1909. Local banking institutions have sent from $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 so far this week to Canada and San Francisco and banks in Boston and Philadelphia were busy drawing on their resources here. Returns of the Harriman roads for October were uncommonly interesting, in that they showed large losses in net, despite those of Union Pacific decreased $717,566, while Southern Pacific lost $721,000. The returns of the St. Louis and San Francisco system for the same month ran from favorable to adverse, with a fairly substantial decrease for the first four months of the fiscal year. Bonds were steady with extremely narrow transactions. Total sales par value, $1,727,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call.

New York Curb Stocks.

(Special service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., members New York Stock Exchange, 218 West Third street, Los Angeles.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—China and Inspiration were the only feature lis in a dull market. The market closed soft in sympathy with the big board which, during the morning, hardened on a condition of demoralization. The Boston coppers developed considerable weakness and considerable liquidation took place in many of the standard issues. The action of the curb will to a great extent depend upon the inside market, pro.

Boston Copper Market.

BOSTON, Nov. 30.—We believe underlying conditions are unchanged, and that the metal market is daily getting into a stronger position. We advise a careful scrutiny of the actual merits of stocks to be bought, but believe that the purchases at the present time of Copper Range, East Butte, Hancock, Wolverine, Allouez, Osceola Cananea, Giroux and North Butte will prove handsome profits. THE WEATHER.

LOCAL OFFICE, U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, Nov. 30.—[Reported by A. B. Wollaber, Local Forecaster.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 30.03; at 5 p.m., 29.95. Thermometer for the corresponding hours showed 61 deg. and 62 deg. Relative humidity: 5 a.m., 75 per cent.; 5 p.m., 49 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., north, velocity 7 miles; 5 p.m., northwest, velocity 5 miles. Character of weather, 5 a.m., clear; 5 p.m., cloudy. Highest temperature, 62 deg.; lowest, 55 deg. Rainfall for season, 1.62 inches. Barometer reduced to sea level.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.—A disturbance now passing to sea off the North Atlantic coast has given precipitation during the last twenty-four hours from the western Gulf region to the New England coast, and precipitation is also reported from Western Missouri, the Northern Rocky Mountain region and Oregon; otherwise no rain or snow of consequence has fallen in the United States. A vast area of high pressure covers the entire section of the country west of the Mississippi River, giving fair weather over the greater portion of the western half of the country. Temperatures are generally lower throughout the United States, except in the Southwest, where there has been a slight raise. The indications are for fair weather in Los Angeles and vicinity during the next thirty-six hours, with moderately high day temperatures.

Pasadena, Redlands, Riverside and San Bernardino: Fair tonight and Thursday.

California south of the Tehachepi: Fair tonight and Thursday.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—Forecast:

San Joaquin Valley: Cloudy Thursday, with showers; light east wind, changing to south.

RAILROAD RECORD.

RATE DISPUTES COME TO FORE.

Hope to Secure Local Man on Commerce Court.

Refrigeration Charges Up a Week Hence.

Attorney Leaves for East in Growers' Interest.

The perennial dispute between the railroads and the citrus fruit growers of Southern California is coming to the fore again as a subject of not a little agitation among shippers and carriers. The latest developments go to show that the present season of controversy will be fruitful in the establishment of decisive precedents.

The final hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the question of refrigeration charges is scheduled to begin in Washington, D. C., one week from today. Attorney A. F. Call, who will represent the Fruit Growers' Exchange and the fruit men generally, will leave tomorrow for the Capital city to make the concluding presentation of the shippers' claims.

These, as set forth in the hearing held last March and in the supplementary hearing in September, are that refrigeration of citrus fruits en route is merely incidental to the shipping, and should not be made the subject of a large additional profit, which is now asserted to be approximately 100 per cent.

Considerable interest is aroused in fruit-growing circles by reports from the East to the effect that the President has practically decided upon the personnel of the new comerce court, which is to act as a final court of appeal in all cases involving shipping rates.

Senator Flint has been putting forth every effort to have a Southern California man named as a member of this court. The members of the local Fruit Growers' Exchange express themselves as sanguine of success; and regard the naming of such as being practically a guarantee that they will attain at least a part of the desired reductions through him. It is understood that no protest will be forthcoming from the railroads, the officials being inclined to consider it as something of a victory, themselves.

One of the first cases to be brought the new court will be that of the legality of the present injunction restraining the roads from the enforcement of the $1.15 rate for which they are fighting. Its ruling is expected to be decisive, not only in regard to the condition of California fruit on the Eastern market, but as to the relation which the Western products will bear to those of Flordia. The pricipal reason adduced for low rates from Flordia hitherto has been those prevailing from California, irrespective of the difference in distance.

The railway officials, who are leading the battle for higher rates, base their assertions to a considerable extent upon the recent investigations of, Attorney Frank M. Thompson in the matter of the reported exorbitant charges of commission men upon the growers themselves.

Thompson's reports, which are to be submitted to the commerce court, are construed by the carriers to mean unquestionably that the real injury to the growers is done by the jobbers and not by the railroads. He cites instances of fruit shipped from Southern California to Chicago commission men, where, though the freight rates were but a small fraction of the value of the shipment, the grower received nothing.

Further asserting that like conditions obtain even in the fruit-growing section itself, where freight rates are not a factor, he says:

"I can purchase the highest grade of California apricots in Chicago for $1.32 a dozen, where the same goods in Los Angeles cost $1.65 a dozen. The finest grade of California lemon cling peaches cost $1.44 a dozen in Chicago and $1.90 in California at the same time. These canned fruits were raised and packed in California. After the jobber had shipped them to Chicago I could purchase the apricots for 25 and the peaches for 46 cents cheaper, a dozen cans than in California.

POSITION ABOLISHED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] E. J. Patterson, architect of the Southern Pacific Company, served his connection with the railroad today. It is understood the position will be abolished and in the future the work will be given to individuals.

Architect Patterson returned a few days ago from Chicago, where he made arrangements to handle work locally for a firm of Eastern architects. He has been in the service of the Southern Pacific for ten years, and during that time has built several large depot buildings. In addition to his work for the Southern Pacific, he has built depots for the Oregon Short Line, handling the work on the Union station at Salt Lake City, and for the Oregon and Washington passenger depot at Seattle.

PULLMANS PAY TAXES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] For the first time in four years the Pullman Palace Car Company has paid its taxes to the State of California. It declined to pay its assessment in 1907, 1908 and 1909. The three years, taxes are now in the courts for adjudication and it was expected that the same course would be taken for the year 1910. But there was a surprise when a representative of the company came to the city and paid for this year. The amount was $36,694.62 and this amount was distributed into the following funds by Controller Nye: general fund $2537.45; school fund $2150.30; interest and sinking fund $1253.12; State University fund $664.56; high school fund $254.98; railway tax fund $28,863.22.

DURBROW QUITS ESPEE.

COMMERCIAL COUNSEL RESIGNS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] C. W. Durbrow, for eight years in the legal department of the Southern Pacific, acting recently as commercial counsel, has tendered his resignation to W. F. Herrin. It is understood the resignation will take effect January 1. Derbrow left for Washington, D. C., today to assist Attorney Peter F. Dunne of the Southern Pacific in some important cases now pending there. He expects to return to San Francisco before the first of the year to complete his work with the railway company before finally severing his connection with the corporation. In railroad circles there is much conjecture as to who will be Durbrow's successor. Guy Shoup of the legal department being generally mentioned for the place.

Will Celebrate Arrival.

Announcement was made yesterday that a reception programme is being prepared to signalize the arrival of the big new ocean-going steamers, the Yale and Harvard, which are expected to arrive here December 12 from their trip around the Horn. Details have not yet been worked out, though one feature will be a mid-ocean reception tendered by officials of the Salt Lake Railroad and the Pacific Navigation Company, who will go down to meet the big boats in Capt. Goodall's yacht. At the time of their arrival at San Pedro the boats will be given a thorough overhauling, which will include the replacing of their present coal furnaces by oil burners. The one first in readiness will be requisitioned for a pleasure trip for officials of the two companies to Catalina and elsewhere. The date for the begining of the regular Coast run will be about December 20.

Capt. Goodall, one of the owners, is now in San Francisco arranging the final details for the new service. The company will shortly open offices in the Pacific Electric Building.

Probably No Changes.

The reports to the effect that there are to be some radical changes in the present set of officials which are at the head of the Pacific Electric Railway because of the recent change in ownership are by no means equally current in the inside circles of railwaydom. Those best in a position to know are not committing themselves but it is generally understood that there are to be no further shifts.

Traffic Notes.

The Santa Fe officials are looking forward to a record season in the matter of tourist travel to Southern California. Extra coaches will be carried on most of the trains leaving Chicago during the coming weeks. Beginning January 1 and extending through February the road will run four extra "limiteds" a week from Chicago through to this city. Hithterto but two extras have been found necessary.

Arrangements have been made by H. P. Wood, of the Hawaiian Promotion Committee, to extend special entertainment to the Pacific Coast traveling passenger agents at the convention to be held in Honolulu at the time of the Floral Parade, February 20. Two delegates have been appointed to represent the local Chamber of Commerce and a special excursion for the public will leave for Honolulu on February 11. Charles Brown of the steamship department of the German-American Savings Bank is acting as the local agent.

Joseph N. Henderson, Pacific Coast passenger agent for the Washington-Sunset Route is visiting the local offices from his headquarters in San Francisco.

W. H. Tayloe, general agent for the Southern Railway with headquarters at Denver, arrived in the city yesterday on a tour of inspection of the Coast roads.
